RED TAPE UNDONE.

A Comprehensive Explanation of the Management of Municipal Affairs.

The Newton Free Library, Its History, Resources and Needs, Briefly Outlined.

A municipal institution, which somehow, is never thought of by the average resident as a city department at all, is the Newton Free Library.

The present library is the outgrowth of a literary association formed at Newton Corner in 1848, and which conceived the free library idea in 1865. The present site was purchased in 1866 and the corner stone of the building was laid by the late Hon. J. Wiley Edmonds, in 1868. The money for its construction and equipment was raised by popular subscription, over $65,000 being received, and it was formally opened on June 17, 1870. The library was incorporated in 1871 and on the inauguration of the city government in 1874, steps were taken to transfer the property to the city. This was consummated in 1876, when the keys were delivered to the city authorities on March 16.

The present library is managed by a board of five trustees appointed by the Mayor, and which annually organizes by the choice of a president, a secretary, a librarian, a superintendent and appoints sub-committees on library and building. Assistant librarians and a janitor are also appointed by the trustees, who hold monthly meetings except during July and August.

The librarian is the executive officer of the trustees and has the general care of the library, books, and assistants at the main library and branches, of which the yearly cost of maintenance is about $13,000. It is needless to say that such a position requires executive as well as literary ability, and Newton has always been fortunate in finding the right person to fill the position. The first librarian was Miss James, who served for 17 years, and was followed temporarily by the Rev. Bradford K. Pierce, whose six months in office ended on Jan. 1st, 1888. Miss Elizabeth P. Thurston, the present librarian, was his successor and brought to the position an experience of seven years in the library as an assistant. Her work is marked by a thoroughness and conscientiousness which is greatly appreciated by all lovers of books.

The library now contains 59,387 books with a circulation in the homes of over 167,000 volumes, and about 2,000 new books are added yearly. 41 newspapers and 115 magazines are also taken. Although Newton is the 16th city of Massachusetts in population outside of Boston, in point of circulation it stands 4th; a fact which speaks volumes (no pun) for its literary proclivities.

New books are usually selected by the librarian, who regularly visits the various book stores twice each month, and from which new books are sent on approval. These books are read or examined by the librarian or by competent persons selected by her, and if approved, are purchased for the library. Several copies of popular books in fiction are usually purchased, and there is a growing tendency towards more copies and less variety. The purchase of the more expensive books requires the approval of the trustees.

The library can be roughly classified, numerically as follows: Fiction, 11,000; essays and periodicals, 13,000; history, 16,000; arts and sciences, 12,000 and reference, 5,800. About 50 per cent. of the total circulation is prose fiction.

Every resident of the city over 12 years of age, is entitled to two cards, on presentation of an application, endorsed by some responsible citizen.

One card can be used for any kind of books and the other for all books except fiction. School teachers, both public and private, are entitled to 15 cards for books for pupils and 3 for their own use. The latter favor is also granted to teachers who reside, but do not teach in Newton. The president or chairman of clubs may have 15 cards for books for club use, excepting, however, new and popular works. Clergymen are entitled to 5 additional cards, and in every way the library assists and encourages the circulation of its wealth of literature. Over 13,000 names have been registered since the inauguration of the present card system in 1895.

It is also interesting to learn that portfolios, each containing 15 photographs of paintings and sculpture (of which there are 3800 in the library) birds, views of English, Italian scenery etc., can also be taken out on cards in the same way as books. This is also true of neat tin boxes, containing a stereoscope and sets of views, and 402 volumes and portfolios of music are also available for general circulation. Magazines are also circulated singly after current use in the reading room and until bound into volumes.

A complete card catalogue, containing about 150,000 cards is constantly kept up to date, and in position for popular use. Catalogues and bulletins are also published and kept for sale. Weekly bulletins are also inserted in the Newton papers, and every means taken to keep the public informed of the accessions to the library.

A new method of numbering and classifying will soon be adopted, but it is interesting to learn that the present numbering may be interpreted as follows: The first figure of the upper number denotes the classification, 3 meaning travel, 6 stands for fiction, 7 for history and so on; the second figure denotes the shelf, and the lower number denotes the order on the shelf. A book numbered 32.147 would therefore mean, travel, second shelf, book 147.

Old books which are too delapidated for binding or general use were formerly burned, but the library has recently contributed them to the contagious wards of the Newton hospital, to seamen's homes and vessels and has even caused them to be sent to far away Alaska. Books are of course rebound and mended wherever possible and used as long as decency will allow. Papers from the reading room are sold for old paper and the magazines are bound and placed on the library shelves for circulation.

The library maintains reading and reference rooms and branches at West Newton, Auburndale, Newton Centre and Upper Falls, each in charge of one assistant. That at West Newton is the oldest and was formerly the property of the West Newton Athenaeum. It has 5,000 books which circulate in that village, and it also draws books from the main library in a similar manner as the other branches. These branches are open daily except Sundays and holidays for seven hours, although that at the Upper Falls is open but 5 hours. Agencies, where books can be left and called for, are also maintained at Newton Highlands, Newtonville, Lower Falls, Waban, Nonantum, Chestnut Hill and Oak Hill. Books are exchanged daily with the agencies at Newtonville, West Newton, Auburndale, Newton Centre, Newton Highlands and Upper Falls; twice a week with Lower Falls and Waban, twice a week with Nonantum and once a week with Chestnut Hill and Oak Hill.

Fines of two cents a day are imposed for retaining books beyond the limit fixed on the cover, and have a salutary effect. The receipts from this source and from the sale of catalogues and bulletins are utilized for current expenses, any balance at the end of the year being used for the purchase of books.

The main library and reading rooms are open daily except Sundays and holidays from 10 a. m. to 8 p. m., and until 9 p. m. on Saturdays. The matter of opening the library and reading rooms on Sundays and holidays is being agitated but has not, as yet, taken definite shape.

The great need of the library at present is more shelf room. The shelf room obtained by the enlargement of the library in 1887 at a cost of $25,000 has been exhausted and a second tier of stacks is necessary. Books are now piled around upon the floor and tables all over the building, and it is very probable that efforts will be made this fall towards obtaining an appropriation for this purpose.

The library receives the income of several funds, donated by its friends. The late John S. Farlow gave $5,000, the income to be used for the purchase of books for the reference library. The income of the Jewett Art Fund of $10,000 is used to purchase photographs, music and other works of art. The several hundred dollars each year from the Read Fund provide new books of a general character, and the income of the $1,000 of the Alden Spear Fund is used for books on manufacturing and mechanical trades. The will of the late Mary Shannon also contained a bequest of $5,000, which has not yet been received.

In conclusion it should be said frankly that Newton ought to be proud of its library. It stands as a monument to the public spirit of those gentlemen of a past generation, who were far sighted enough to provide for all time to come for the dissemination of literature to all who desire to avail themselves of its stores of knowledge.

The "Allen" School.

At the reunion of the West Newton English and Classical School Alumni Association, 31st of May last, at Woodland Park Hotel, Mr. Nathaniel T. Allen made the following unique statement. It was in reference to the development and maintenance of the "Allen Brothers' School" at West Newton, during its extended life.

"April 12, 1848, N. T. Allen accepted an invitation from Horace Mann and others to take charge as principal of the model department of the State Normal School, then at West Newton, continuing in that position nearly six years, he, in connection with Rev. Cyrus Peirce, the Nestor in Education, established January 1854, the West Newton English and Classical School, continuing as its principal until June 1900, thus completing over 52 years of teaching in West Newton. The school was a success from the beginning in number of its students and character of those in this and foreign countries, who placed their children here.

Sept. 1854, George E. Allen, then principal of the grammar school at Newton, joined his brother as associate and continued until his death 1888, teaching 34 years.

William F. Allen, Mr. Allen's cousin, co-author of Allen & Greenough's Latin Text Books, taught from Sept. 1856 to 1863, a period of 7 years.

Phineas Allen, uncle, joined in 1858, continuing as special tutor till his death in 1885, period of 27 years.

James T. Allen, brother, joined as associate principal, 1860, continuing until his death, 1900, 40 years in all.

Rev. T. Prentiss Allen, cousin, joined in 1863, as associate principal, continuing till 1868, 5 years.

Joseph A. Allen, brother, joined as associate principal, 1869 to 1891 also 1886 to 1895, period of 21 years.

Edward A. H. Allen, cousin, continued from 1872 to '74, leaving to take charge of Sherborn Academy, 2 years.

Rev. Joseph H. Allen, D. D., of Harvard University, cousin, co-author Allen & Greenough's Latin books, taught from '71 to '74, period of 3 years. The daughters and nieces of "Allen Brothers" instructed in the school an aggregate of 64 years.

"This is seen the unprecedented amount of 255 years which the Allen family has given in developing and retaining the West Newton English and Classical School of "Allen Brothers."

This old school, rich in fine tradition as in service was entrusted in June 1900 to two young and energetic men of culture and experience, Frank H. Wood, P. L. D., and Albert E. Bailey, A. B., both of Harvard. They continue to adopt whatever in the newer methods and ideas seem likely to enhance the usefulness and reputation of the school as a pioneer in the educational field. They have already won, to a remarkable degree, the confidence and esteem of the Alumni and of the community. It is confidently anticipated that this institution which has attracted the attention of educators for its earliest years, training its thousands of boys and girls in our community and drawing to its influence scores of students from foreign countries, (there being at present students from Porto Rico, Cuba, Hawaii and Japan). It is anticipated that its previous character and character building influence will be maintained.

A Shocking Calamity

"Lately befell a railroad laborer," writes Dr. A. Kellett, of Williford, Ark. "His foot was badly crushed, but Bucklen's Arnica Salve quickly cured him. It's simply wonderful for Burns, Boils, Piles and all skin eruptions. It's the world's champion healer. Cure guaranteed. 25c. Sold by Arthur Hudson, druggist."

SCHOOL BOARD.

EARLY SESSION WEDNESDAY EVENING FOR TRANSACTION OF ROUTINE BUSINESS.

The school board resumed its sessions Wednesday evening after a two months' vacation. The meeting was brief and only business of routine character was transacted.

Elizabeth P. Dudley was appointed an assistant in the Bigelow grammar school at a salary of $500 a year. The resignation of S. Warren Davis, instructor of Greek in the High school for 25 years, was accepted. The board, in its vote to this effect, expressed its high appreciation of Mr. Davis' service and extended its heartfelt wish for future success. Robert R. Truitt was elected as Mr. Davis' successor at a salary of $2,000.

Mr. Stevens, an assistant in the Mason school, was granted a leave of absence from Sept. 9 to Dec. 31. The resignation of Mary A. Darr, to take effect Oct. 4, was accepted. Carrie E. Hale and Ida B. Eames were appointed assistants in the Mason grammar school, each at a salary of $600. The resignation of Maud E. Rice, an assistant in the Hyde grammar school, was accepted. Leave of absence from Oct. 5 to June 30 of next year was granted Helen M. Noyes, an assistant in the High school. Marion E. Wells declined her appointment as a teacher in the Wade grammar school. The budget, containing estimates of next year's department expenditures, was presented and laid over for consideration at the meeting, Sept. 25. The sum of $6,271 was appropriated to cover the August expenses of the school department.

Superintendent Fifield had no monthly report to offer the school board but said that the attendance of pupils at the opening of schools next Monday would be in excess of former years. He also said the teaching force would be increased by four.

Fall Millinery.

Miss Caroline writes: I find no words that will fully describe my feelings of delight and pleasure after a circuit of the drawing rooms of the Paris milliners. I have seen so many lovely models that I can hardly say which will please the most. All are new, pretty, stylish, up-to-date and yet they remain nearly of the same shape and style as those we have had during the summer. Every thing is flat and the low shape is really so very lady-like. The turban double and triple is shown in large varieties and a great number of the tricorn shape in velvet trimmed with fur. There is a distinct revival of jewels on the hats and Scotch plaids effects are also to the fore.

Miss Caroline will have an opening of her selection about Oct. 1st at her rooms, 486 Boylston street, Boston.

The Lazy, Stupid Shag.

"The shag is the laziest and most stupid form of life to be found anywhere on the globe. It is an aquatic fowl, with big, clumsy looking beak and with a form something like the dodo, now extinct," said a western man. "I have spent much time in watching this fowl, which is found in some of the shallow lakes, and the chief point of interest to me was the startling stupidity displayed. They generally squat on stumps or logs in the lake and watch for the smaller fish that play around the surface of the water. They are fairly clever in catching what they want, and they throw out their bill with considerable precision when they get for game. But they never get to eat what they catch until they have fed at least one and maybe more than one member of another kind of water fowl."

"Whenever a shag begins to catch fish, a long legged, long necked water hen will take a place immediately behind him. When the shag lands a fish, the water hen simply reaches over and gets it. Without any show of resentment and without turning around, the shag will continue its watch for fish, and this is kept up until the water hen has finished a meal, and then, if no other enterprising member of the same tribe comes along, the shag is permitted to enjoy the product of its own sleepy efforts."

"I have on one occasion seen one shag feed as many as three water hens before eating a single fish. It is certainly a singular display of stupidity, and after having watched the performance a number of times I am convinced that the shag is actually too dull to even know that the water hen stands behind him to steal the fish out of his mouth."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

WITHOUT TURNING A HAIR.

A Londoner Calmly Returned Money Given to Him by Mistake.

A gentleman of my acquaintance had a curious experience of manners and customs of modern England a few nights ago at the theater. He had taken four stalls, but at the last moment found two of his party unable to come. On his arrival at the theater he left the two spare tickets at the box office, the clerk promising to sell them if he could and send the cash to him when they were sold. He took his place and soon afterward was gratified to see his two surplus seats occupied. The individuals who took them were attired in evening dress and bore the outward semblance of gentlemen. My friend began to look out for the money which was to come from the box office. Presently a commissionaire entered, passed down the row of seats and addressed one of the two newcomers. My friend noticed that the commissionaire passed something to one of the gentlemen, who put it into his pocket without a word.

A sense of uneasiness stole over my friend with regard to the 15 shillings that was due to him, and as the evening was getting on he thought he would go and make an inquiry at the box office. His suspicions were verified. The clerk had sent in the money by a commissionaire. The commissionaire was called from the door and on seeing my friend at once realized that he had given the money to the wrong man. He promptly went back to the theater, my friend following to see the fun. The commissionaire went straight to the party to whom he had handed the money and said, "Ere, you've got 15 shillings that don't belong to you." The other replied in an unconcerned way, "Oh, yes!" took the money out of his pocket and returned it to the commissionaire. "He showed no trace of embarrassment," says my friend. "He handed back the money, as he had pocketed it, without turning a hair."

I always like to think the best of people, and possibly this individual, being a stranger to music halls, was under the impression that it is the practice of the proprietors of such establishments to send a commissionaire around from time to time to distribute cash bonuses among the audience.—London Truth.

PECULIAR NAMES.

The Queer Way Ten Million Children Were Designated.

"In a long experience in the treasury department I have come across a very large number of names, many of which are rather peculiar," explained an old official, "but I think the list of names in connection with the subscription to the 3 per cent bonds surpasses anything I have ever observed. Of these the one that struck me most was a man who signed himself Ten Million and who resides out in Oregon. We thought the name was an imaginative one and wrote the man that it was desired that the bonds should be registered in real names only and that no further attention would be paid to his subscription until he was heard from. He replied that his name was Ten Million. His letter was written on the printed letterhead of the firm of Million & Million, two brothers."

"Then followed an explanation that his father and mother were unable to select names for their children that were mutually satisfactory and that as a result, though they had had ten children, none of them was ever christened formally. The first child was a girl, and she was known only as One Million. The second child, also a girl, was known as Two Million. Thus they ran along until Ten Million was reached, and he was the writer of the letter, the other member of the firm being a brother whose only name, as far as the family was concerned, was Seven Million. The others had taken on additional names to their names, and he had adopted the name of Ten Million, but his real name was Ten Million and nothing else. The bonds were issued to him and on the books of the department were registered in the name of Ten Million."—Washington Star.

When Matches Were Introduced.

The Atlas, a London newspaper, published on Jan. 10, 1830, the following paragraph under the head of "Instantaneous Light: 'Among the different methods invented for obtaining light instantaneously ought certainly to be recorded that of Mr. Walker, chemist, Stockton-on-Tees. He supplies the purchaser with prepared matches, which are put into boxes, but are not liable to change in the atmosphere, and also with a piece of fine glass paper folded in two. Even a strong blow will not inflame the matches, because of the softness of the wood underneath, nor does rubbing upon wood or any common substance produce any effect except that of spilling the match. But when one is plucked between the folds of the glass paper and suddenly drawn out it is instantly inflamed. Mr. Walker does not make them for extensive sale, but only to supply the small demand in his own neighborhood.'—Newcastle (England) Chronicle.

Her Version of It.

A young girl in a class preparing for admission into the church was asked by the pastor how she ought to obey the fifth commandment, to honor her father and mother. She answered promptly, "I ought to take them out for walks on Sundays, and I ought not to let them see how much more I know than they do." She expressed an opinion that she was quite current among young people concerning the preponderance of knowledge in the rising generation.—Congregationalist.

"Out of Sorts."

Nothing tastes good. Nothing gives pleasure. The mind is dull and sluggish. The will is weak. Little things cause great irritation. What's the matter? The probabilities are that the stomach is deranged and the liver involved.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery makes a man who is run down and dispirited feel like a new being. It cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition, stirs the sluggish liver into action, and increases the activity of the blood-making glands, so that there is an abundant supply of pure, rich blood.

Mr. Edward Jacobs, of Marengo, Crawford Co., Indiana, writes: "After three years of suffering with liver trouble and malaria I gave up all hope of ever getting straight again, the last chance was to try your medicine. I had tried all the home doctors and received but little relief. After taking three bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and one vial of his 'Pleasant Peppermint' I am stout and hearty. It is due entirely to your wonderful medicines."

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, containing 1008 large pages, in paper covers, is sent free on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

A LAISSEZ FAIRE POLICY.

Newton has always been noted for unconcern over matters of grave importance. The separation of grade crossings on the north side was not brought about until many lives had been needlessly sacrificed on the altar of neglect. The widening of Washington street, the necessity for which had been recognized for some years, required the death of Chief Bixby to emphasize that fact, and to furnish the spur to public opinion.

And now the city is complacently facing two problems, both of which demand prompt action. The separation of grade crossings on the south side has already been agitated, but the city government and the state judiciary, where the matter is now pending, are proceeding in a most leisurely manner, while the dangerous crossings are a daily menace to the public. On the north side the Graphic has frequently called attention to the congestion of Nonantum square by the street railways and, although no serious accident has as yet occurred, the conditions are ripe for almost any kind of injury to life and limb.

Public opinion should be aroused to these danger spots in our very midst, and pressure brought to bear on the proper authorities to accelerate the machinery by which the remedy is to be applied.

An important omission from our editorial of last week enumerating the advantages of residing in this city, was the Newton Free Library.
A glance at our city article this week will show that this department is not the least in adding to the attractiveness of the city.

A most worthy cause is presented in the letter from Mr. Walton, printed in another column. The modesty of the applicant is in refreshing contrast to the regular monthly or quarterly calls from similar institutions.

Our local columns are recording the return of the many vacationists to enjoy the beauty of the fall in their home city.

The extract from Mr. Allen's address gives the most conclusive reasons for the name of the "Allen School."

Next week witnesses the resumption of active work by the schools and city government.

Lines are already being drawn for the municipal caucuses, but two months away.

The departure of Mr. S. Warren Davis from the High school is universally regretted.

City Hall Notes.

Col. Kingsbury and Major Ranlett were guests at the annual reunion of the Burnside Association at Worcester, on Monday.

The first meeting of the Board of Aldermen occurs next Monday, with routine business only on the docket.

City Treasurer Ranlett was enabled to borrow $50,000 recently on very favorable terms.

The water department is laying a main in Pine street this week.

The semi-annual water bills will be sent out today.

The walls and piers for the new covered reservoir are virtually completed, and ready for the covering, which the steel strike has greatly delayed.

The City Treasurer expects to send out the poll tax notices next week.

The mayor will send in the annual list of election officers at next Monday evening's meeting of the aldermen.

There were 34 deaths during August, 17 males and 17 females. The rate was 12.14 per 1000. The principal cause was cholera infantum, from which there were 10 deaths. Five cases of typhoid fever were on hand Sept. 1.

Golf Notes.

Other news will be found on page 2.

To-morrow at the Newton Golf Club will be played the qualifying round in the club championship.

Mr. A. H. Paul won the stroke competition of the Alhambra Golf Club yesterday, defeating Paul Knight, with whom he had been tied.

Mr. A. J. Wellington broke the amateur record of the Braeburn course yesterday with a score of 83.

Miss Marion R. Haskell of the Newton Centre Golf Club, won the Beaver Meadow Cup for ladies, at the annual tournament over the Soo-Nipi Park Golf course, at Lake Sunapee, last week.

To the Voters of the City of Newton:

Twice by your votes has the Australian caucus act been approved as the method of holding Republican caucuses in our city and it remains for the voters to do their part to carry out the principles of that act and overcome the objection often urged against participating in caucuses, i. e., that the nominations are all cut and dried by interested parties.

Under the present Caucus Act, the duty, as well as the privilege, lies with the voters of first selecting and placing in nomination candidates for office and delegates to represent you in the several conventions. If you fail to make nominations then this duty under the law falls upon your Ward and City Committee, that an official ballot may be before the caucuses. If a list of candidates and delegates nominated in the interest of the people is not before the caucuses the fault will lay with the voters and not with the system.

I sincerely hope that the leading citizens of each ward will meet together and make up a list of candidates and delegates that will ably represent impartially their respective wards. Nomination blanks for this purpose can be obtained from the secretary of the Republican City Committee at Room 1, Masonic Bldg., Newtonville, on Monday, Sept. 9, at 3 p. m. Only official nomination blanks will be received. These blanks must be filled up as directed and filed with the secretary at his office on Friday, Sept. 15th, between 3 and 5 o'clock p. m.

It is desirable that each ward have more than one list of candidates and delegates that the voters may have opportunity to make choice and give to the caucuses the same lively interest that attends elections.

John T. Langford.

WABAN.

Mills undertaking rooms 813 Washington St. Tel. 445-5. Formerly with G. H. Gregg, tf.

Lillian F. Hill has purchased a lot of 11,518 feet of land and buildings in Waban avenue from Rebecca F.
Sampson.

Mrs. Phelps is in Vermont with her mother, Mrs. S. W. Due, who is in excellent health and enjoying her trip, although now in her ninety-third year.

One of the largest sales of vacant land reported in the vicinity of this city within recent years has just been completed. The transaction involves about 500,000 feet of land, Stephen Jennings conveying to L. L. P. Atwood. There are 10 lots, which have been in the possession of the grantor for the same number of years. It is the intention of the purchaser to cut the land up for building purposes, so that there is a prospect of considerable building in this part of the city of Newton in the next year or two.
The property is situated as follows:
The figures representing square feet of land: Devon road, 66,000; Wylow road, 97,870; Waban avenue, 63,600;
Nehoiden road, 34,600; Nehoiden road,
10,000; Waban avenue, 52,220; Collins road, 117,655; Alban road, 11,211; Neshobe road, 18,292; and Alban road, 38,852. The land is taxed on from 4 to 14 cents per foot. The consideration indicated is $50,000. The purchaser of this large area of land is now negotiating for the acquisition of three times as much more close to the Waban station, so that it is expected that his holdings in this part of the city will reach an aggregate of about 2,000,000 feet of land. Considerable improvement of this property is looked for in the near future, as the land is close to the boulevard along the Charles river which has been planned by the Metropolitan park commission, now making settlements for the takings.

K. Smith had been called as the assistant at Grace church is not correct.
No action has been taken yet by the both services next Sunday.

The course for the great automo-formerly of Newton, but now prop-lay out the route.

Mr. George N. Remele, formerly a member for a number of years of the Channing church choir and more recently a member of the Ruggles Street Quartet, has volunteered to sing at the 50th anniversary of the Channing church, Sept. 15. This will be interesting news to his many friends. He will sing "Fear Not Ye, O Israel" in the offertory.

The annual meeting of the Bos-

Why Don't You Learn Shorthand?

Stenography is now so important a factor in business and affords so good a vocation that it will be interesting to note that the average time required last year to finish at Hickox's Shorthand School, Copley Square, Boston, was six and a half months. This is a brief time in which to thoroughly learn shorthand at a good school, for it must be borne in mind, this is the leading shorthand school in the country, and the standard of efficiency is higher there than elsewhere; still the cost is not excessive—$15 a month. In other words, smart young women or men at an outlay of about one hundred dollars can learn in half a year, and learn well, a business by which they can at once be sure of earning a good livelihood.
The theory, 12 lessons, can be learned as well by mail as orally, the cost being $1 a lesson. tf

The Jockey's Dog.

"The dog of a jockey's life is 'taking on flesh,'" says Almslee. "He dreads this as a heavy dreads to lose her charms, and his whole thought from the age of 10 to 25 is to avoid the catastrophe. This is the pernicious feature of the life and distinguishes it as a healthful sport from boxing or from football, in which the physical being is developed according to the laws of nature and is not outraged or hindered. In order to reduce his weight nine pounds Monk Overton once remained in a Turkish bath from 10 p. m. one day until 2 p. m. the next, with no nourishment except a cup of tea and some toast.

"Again, Mike Bergen, mounted on a favorite, rode such a poor race that the stewards came to the paddock to investigate and punish him for fraudulent riding. They forgave the performance, however, when they found him collapsed and unable to speak. Knowing that he had to ride at a certain weight, Bergen had spent 48 hours in a Turkish bath, eating nothing whatever. When he reached the track, he was so weak that a stimulant was necessary. The one drink of whisky he took so demoralized his faculties that he could scarcely keep his seat in the saddle.

"Such a violation of physical development at the age when a boy should be most rapidly maturing makes it difficult for a jockey ever to become robust. Moreover, the mere riding of a race is a terrible drain on the nerve force of a jockey. A boy may lose a pound of weight in a hard race."

Did Not Speak With Knowledge.

On a clear and beautiful Sunday morning in a parish not far from Milwaukee a priest was pleased to note the presence at service of an unusually large number of the male members of his congregation, and, since he had been informed of considerable trouble in his flock, he considered it an opportune time to give those present a friendly, yet pointed, sermon on forbearance. He charged the men, particularly the married men, to be ever kind, courteous and considerate to women, to overlook all opportunities for trouble, to be good to them and solicitous of their welfare, and finished with a masterly peroration relating to conjugal decency on the part of husbands.

Shortly after he met an old and respected member of the church and said:

"Michael, I was glad to see you at church Sunday. And how did you like the sermon?"

"Well, father," the old man answered, "the language was beautiful, and the delivery was fine; but, he jabsbers, father, if you was only married about three months you'd tell a different story!"—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Resented the Allegation.

Two men zigzagged unsteadily down Long street the other morning shortly after midnight. It was a case of "united we stand, divided we fall." Each of course was trying to steer the other safely home. At length No. 1 came up against a pole and held fast. No. 2 tried in vain to pull him forward. Then No. 1 became impatient at the other's obstinacy and spoke very frankly:

"Shay, you're—hic—you're a slum—thash what you are! I've seen worse men 'n—hic—you in jail!"

This was more than No. 2 could stand. He felt that his honor as a gentleman had been sullied, and, bracing himself stiffly, he replied, with spirit:

"If you shay you're—hic—seen worse men 'n me in jail, why—hic—you're a liar, thash what you are!"—Ohio State Journal.

Don't Believe All You Hear.

A man in a railway carriage was snoring so loudly that his fellow passengers decided to awake him. One particularly sensitive old gentleman shook up the sleeper with a start.

"What's the matter?" he exclaimed.

"Why, your snoring is annoying every one in the carriage," said the old gentleman testily.

"How do you know I'm snoring?"

"Why, we can't help but hear it."

"Well, don't believe all you hear," replied the culprit and went to sleep again.—London Standard.

Took No Chances.

"I'll tell you how it is, parson," said the board of trade clerk. "You've married us, and you'll admit that it is a good deal of speculation. Now, I'll pay you $2, the regular fee, now and call it square or I'll wait 60 days and pay you what experience teaches me the job is really worth to me, even if it's $100."

The clergyman looked long and earnestly at the energetic, determined young woman and sighed.

"Give me the $2," he said.—Chicago Post.

They Hadn't Made Up.

"Well," said he, anxious to patch up their quarrel of yesterday, "aren't you curious to know what's in the package?"

"Not very," his wife, still unrelenting, replied indifferently.

"It's something for the one I love best in all the world."

"Ah, I suppose it's those suspenders you said you needed."—Philadelphia Press.

A Serious Complaint.

What made you leave your place with that woman?" asked Miss Miami Brown. "Didn't he pay you right?"

"Yes," answered Mr. Erasmus Pinkley. "He paid me right, but his clothes was so out of style that I was almost forced to keep out of society."—Washington Star.

Waited For the Appropriation.

"Yes, he has cut loose the dogs of war."

"What was holding them back?"

"The slugs."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Wellington's Endurance.

Wellington on one occasion started, Sir Herbert Maxwell tells us, at 7 a. m., rode to a place 28 miles distant, here held a review and was back at the place from which he had started for dinner between 4 and 5 p. m., says Goldwin Smith in The Atlantic. He galloped 26 miles and back to see whether damage had been done to a pontoon train. He rode 17 miles in two hours from Freneda to Ciudad Rodrigo, where he dined, gave a ball and supper, was in the saddle again at 3 a. m., galloped back to Freneda by 6 and was doing business again at noon. He rose regularly at 6 and wrote till 9 and after dinner wrote again from 9 till 12.

It must be essential to every general and indeed to every man who is bearing a heavy load of anxious business to be a good sleeper. Napoleon was a first rate sleeper; so was Pitt; so was Brougham; so was Mr. Gladstone; so was Wellington.

At Salamanca Wellington, having given his order for the battle, said to his aide-de-camp: "Watch the French through your glass, Fitz Roy. I am going to take a rest. When they reach that copse near the gap in the hills, wake me." Then he lay down and was fast asleep in a minute. In the midst of the critical operations before Waterloo, feeling weary, he laid himself down, put a newspaper over his face and took a nap.

For Exercise Why Not Walk?

The best exercise in the world is walking.

A person who knows how to walk intelligently can get along without a gymnasium. No other form of exercise brings so many muscles into play and develops them so normally. The most popular games are those in which walking forms a prominent part. Golf, croquet and in a sense cricket and even bicycling merely give an excuse for walking.

Every one knows how to walk properly. It is because of carelessness that so many walk badly. The body should be carried erect, the chest well out, the head back, while the arms should swing freely at the sides. The pace should be regulated to one's strength.

Every one should walk fast enough and far enough to get the body in a comfortable glow. To get the best results from walking one should give his undivided attention to it. In other words, he should walk for the pleasure of it and not carry worries with him.

Excessive walking is injurious. Never walk just after a heavy meal or after violent exercise. And after a walk it is well to rest for 10 or 15 minutes before taking up severe mental work.

Lamb in Either Case.

One of the editors who read the manuscript of Henry Thew Stephenson's "Patron Van Volkenberg" thought that the author might be a good man to know. Accordingly he wrote a pleasant personal letter, inviting a better acquaintance, and, as one of the tests of companionable fitness, inquired whether the author preferred Lamb or Milton.

Mr. Stephenson replied, acknowledging the pleasure the letter had given him and saying:

"I do not know whether you ask if I like Lamb or Milton or Lamb or Milton best, but in either case it's Lamb."

Even the reflection on the editor's handwriting could not detract from the editorial approbation of Mr. Stephenson's choice, and the new partnership of minds was immediately formed.—Youth's Companion.

Would Rather Smoke Than Eat.

"One day," writes an American in Havana, "I came across an old Cuban woman sitting disconsolately on a rock near Morro castle. She told me in Spanish that for three days she had had nothing to eat but a loaf of bread and coffee. She looked ill. I gave her a Spanish dollar and followed in her wake. She entered the first cafe she came to and bought a drink and a cigar. I couldn't help laughing to see her as she walked along the street, puffing away at the weed purchased with my money. She seemed perfectly contented. The Cubans, even the women, would rather smoke than eat. They take only two meals a day, breakfast about 10 o'clock and dinner at 4 in the afternoon."

Pigeons' Nests.

A curious preference of certain pigeons for the use of metallic objects in building their nests is noted by M. Maurice Dusollier in The Revue Scientifique. He assures us that several pairs of these birds that he has observed in Paris have raised their young in nests made entirely of hairpins! These articles they collected in the paths of the Luxembourg. The young pigeons grew up normally as they would in a softer nest. M. Dusollier believes that there is a useful suggestion in this for pigeon fanciers, who are often over-anxious, he thinks, to see that their charges have soft material for their nests.

He Went.

He—Half past 11! Isn't that clock fast?

She—I think not.

He—Well, I guess my watch is like myself—it is slow.

She—But it is not exactly like you.

He—Indeed?

She—No—it goes.—Harlem Life.

An Incurable.

"If there ever was a terrible child in this world," remarked the worried mother, "he's one."

"What's his particular fault?"

"Do what I will, I can't break him of the habit of telling the truth right out when we have company."—Philadelphia Times.

The True Poker Flat.

In 1852 Poker Flat produced $700,000 in gold bullion in a single month and celebrated the event with a triple laughing. Then came the public spasm of virtue which caused the John Oakhursts and the "outcasts of Poker Flat" to depart from thence and die of cold and starvation on the snow bound road to Sandy Bar. There are no "Oakhursts" nor "Uncle Billys" in Poker Flat today, and when the stranger makes the slow descent and suddenly by a sharp turn in the trail comes upon the famous camp he finds in that huddle of cabins little to remind him of the Poker Flat of 1852.

The famous slope presents almost a picture of utter ruin. There are but eight persons living in the old town, while a hundred dead ones sleep in the cemetery. Some of the graves are marked with wooden headboards, some with stakes, but many have nothing above them. Nearly all of them were laid to rest without religious rites save a Bible reading by old Charlie Pond, who, though a professional gambler, was selected for the religious office owing to his excellent voice and oratorical ability.

In 1853 and 1854 there were 2,000 souls in Poker Flat and 15 stores, 5 hotels, 3 dance halls and 7 gambling houses. There is but one man left today of that original company. He is an old and grizzled veteran, who delights to tell how in 1856 a circus came to town and sold 1,500 tickets of admission at $20 each.—W. M. Clemens in Bookman.

A Day Dream of Tennyson.

In the "Life of Tennyson" occurs the following:

"A kind of waking trance I have frequently had, up from boyhood, when I have been all alone. This has generally come upon me through repeating my own name two or three times to myself silently, till all at once, as it were out of the intensity of the consciousness of individuality, the individuality itself seemed to dissolve and fade away into boundless being, and this not in a confused state, but the clearest of the clearest, the surest of the surest, the weirdest of the weirdest, utterly beyond words, where death was an almost laughable impossibility, the loss of personality (if so it were) seeming no extinction but the only true life. This might be the state which St. Paul describes, 'whether in the body I cannot tell, or whether out of the body I cannot tell.' I am ashamed of my feeble description. Have I not said the state is utterly beyond words? But in a moment when I come back to my normal state of 'sanity' I am ready to fight for mein liebes Ich and hold that it will last for moons and moons."

The New Rabbit.

"Why, where did you come from, Uncle Jasper?" I said to the old dorky who had sent the house girl in to tell me that he wanted to see me.

"I come f'm Deatur, Miss Alice," he said. "I got to Atlanta 'bout two hours ago, but I didn't 'low you was ready to see nobody."

"Did you come on the train?" I asked.

"No, ma'am; dat I didn't. I come in on de rabbit."

"On what?"

"On de rabbit. You sholy done heerd er de new rabbit dey's got."

"Oh," I said, "you mean the rapid transit?"

"Yessum, de rabbit transhant. Dat's what I tol' you. She ain't de color er no rabbit—bursting into a laugh—but she sho do git ober de groun' lak one."

—Leslie's Weekly.

A Slander.

Greene—They say that Senator Keener is on the make. They even go so far as to say that that new house of his was given him in payment for his vote.

Gray—It puts me all out of temper to hear such slanders! It is as far as possible from the truth! I know all about it. It was this way: Some people who were interested in a certain bill but him that house that he would vote against the bill, and he didn't and won the house. That was all there was about it. The idea of Keener's being open to bribery!—Boston Transcript.

Adjourned Unanimously.

Correspondent (approaching Irish sergeant)—I am told, sergeant, that you had a skirmish with the enemy this morning.

Sergeant—We did that, sor.

Correspondent—And did you come off with flying colors?

Sergeant—Floyin colors, is it? Be-dad, it wasn't ovuly the colors that was floyin, but every mother's son of us in the bargain.—Boston Courier.

The Sun.

Astronomers tell us that refractory elements like iron, silicon and carbon, perhaps dissociated into simpler substances, are present as vapors in the atmosphere of the sun and that many others of our well known elements, including hydrogen, are also present in this glowing atmosphere, while the heat of the sun's surface and that of the hotter stars is vastly higher than that of the electric furnace.

His Age.

Being asked his age, a colored citizen in a Billville district replied:

"Well, sah, I some older dan dat pine tree yander, I'll bit younger dan dat live oak by de gate en not quite so ol' ez de house whar I livin at. I ain't much on figgers mysef, but you kin count up en see!"—Atlanta Constitution.

The Nearest He Ever Came to It.

"Colonel," she asked, "have you ever been up in a balloon?"

"No," he answered, "but I got to talking art to a Boston lady once, and she had me away up in the air inside of two minutes."—Chicago Herald.

TIMING YOUR TRAIN.

Ways in Which to Learn How Fast You Are Traveling.

"There has been some picturesque fiction written about the east with which railroad men and drummers are supposed to tick off the miles as the train speeds along from things they can see from the car windows," said a railroad conductor to a reporter.

"There is only one strictly accurate way, and that is to seat yourself on the side of the train from which may be observed the white mile posts that line the road and hold your watch on them. If you have a split second watch, it will prove interesting to note that while you made one mile in 90 seconds the next was covered in 53 and the third in 70 seconds, and so on, as the speed of the train increases or slackens. You may also follow around the little second hand on an ordinary watch. It kills time.

"Some pretend to say that they can tell the speed of the train by counting the telegraph poles. If there were an exact number of telegraph poles to every mile, this might be done by a little figuring, but there is a difference. The number of telegraph poles to a mile vary from 33 to 40, depending upon the straight stretches and the curves in the track, the latter having more poles than the former. So, you see, it is not as easy as the drummer would have the other passengers believe.

"If the poles are planted 33 to the mile, they are 100 feet apart, and every 11 passed represents a third of a mile. If placed 40 to a mile, they are 132 feet apart, and every 20 represents half a mile.

"These are easy figures to remember, and by applying them on a journey a passenger may obtain an idea more or less accurate of the speed of the train.

"Another way is to attempt to count the clicks of the wheels of the truck of your car as they pass over the rails where joined. The rails of the roads as placed today are too evenly joined to arrive at an exact determination by this method, because if you miss two or three joints your calculations are thrown out as to accuracy.

"However, there are railroad men who cannot tell you the number of rails to the mile of their own roads, and rails vary in length, the average being 80 feet, some 33 feet and some 60 feet. At 30 feet there are 170 rails to the mile, and if you can count 170 consecutive clicks as your train flies along you may determine its speed and not otherwise."—Washington Star.

THREE SIMPLE QUESTIONS.

And the Librarian Could Not Answer One of Them.

One day two well dressed young women approached the desk of the reading room of a big library. One of them took a memorandum from her pocket-book.

"Can you tell me how many yards—oh, that's the wrong list!" she said, hastily bringing forth another slip of paper. "Here it is. Will you please tell me who is Rudyard Kipling's favorite author?"

"I am unable to tell you, never having heard that he had one," admitted one of the librarians.

"Dear me!" said the young woman irritably. "It is one of the questions for our next club meeting. Well, which one of Thackeray's books brought him the most income?"

"That you can probably find out by consulting a book, the number of which I will give you," said the official.

"Oh, I can't stop to look it up!" she said hurriedly. "I thought you could tell me at once. Well, there's one more thing. Bessie Cummock, my cousin in Manchester, had a splendid book when I was there last year for anecdotes of famous people. I can't remember the name of it or who wrote it, but it was about so big"—illustrating with one finger on the desk—"and it has a dark green cover. Now, can you tell me what it is? Some day when I have time I would like to get it out. Of course you must have it in the library?"

For the third time the official was obliged to confess his inability to give her direct information. She looked at him with a piercing gaze and turned away, saying audibly to her companion:

"There, that just shows what all this talk about their being examined for positions in libraries amounts to! Three perfectly simple questions, all on literary subjects, and he couldn't answer one of them!"—Savings Journal.

The Toothpick Habit.

"I'd like to know what my customers do with all the toothpicks they carry away," remarked a restaurant proprietor the other day. "Few men take a single toothpick. Most of them take half a dozen and many a whole handful, and when they come in here again for the next meal they take as many over again. They don't need them. It's all due to the toothpick chewing habit, which seems to be growing. There isn't anything particularly pleasant about chewing a wooden toothpick, and it may be injurious if a piece of the wood lodges in the throat or gets down into the stomach, as it is very apt to. But the toothpick chewing habit is becoming a rival to the gum and tobacco habits. The only reason I can give for it is that the toothpicks are free and gum and tobacco are not."—New York Sun.

Difficult to Treat.

"Well, what is the matter with your husband?" the physician asked as he laid down his repair kit and removed his gloves.

"Innaginary insomnia," replied Mrs. Fosdick.

"Innaginary insomnia?" repeated the physician inquiringly.

"That's what it is. He thinks he doesn't sleep at night, but he gets lots more sleep than I do."—Detroit Free Press.

Wife—But he'll come up here.

Husband—Then we'll go down cellar, my dear. Surely a ten room house ought to be big enough to hold three people without crowding.—Detroit Free Press.

The Twentieth Century.

The advent of the new century is to be commemorated by the Newton GRAPHIC in the publication of a handsomely bound volume, entitled, "Newton, The Garden City of the Commonwealth, 1874-1901." It will contain valuable and interesting historical matter, fully illustrated with half ton engravings of churches, schools, residences, street views, parks, etc. The history will tell of leading events, characters and progress of the city, and the many advantages of Newton as a beautiful and desirable place of residence will be fully shown. The volume will also contain the portraits and biographies of representative men who, in their lives, their work or their influence have made Newton of to-day the garden city of the Commonwealth and of New England.

It is believed that such a work will commend itself to the citizens of Newton as bringing together a carefully collated record of the lives of men who have contributed to the welfare of our city; men of whom we are justly proud as educators, lawyers, physicians, clergymen and men of affairs.

Such a publication at this time will give to the present, as up to date account of the city and will bequeath to the future a legacy of what Newton was at the beginning of what promises to be a most remarkable century.

BOSTON AMUSEMENTS.

BOSTON MUSIC HALL: VAUDEVILLE.

The names of Bunth and Rudd are household words; they are synonyms for mirth, nonsense, laughter and jollity. Bunth and Rudd have no equals and there is no act and never has been an act which combined such funny sayings and doings as theirs. The original Rio Brothers, who it is admitted, have no equals on the flying rings, will be seen for the first time. Harry Wright and Nellie Lytton will appear in the farcical and satirical sketch, "Money to Burn." William Cahill Davies is known as "The Man from Ireland" and his monologue abounds with true Celtic humor. Falardo, the instrumental man, is a human orchestra in himself. The Craigs have a fine musical act. Gregory and Durrell are remarkable feet balancers. Lizzie N. Wilson is a German comedienne. Swift and Devereaux are neat singers and dancers. Howard and Linder have a laughable absurdity called "A Tough Pupil," and Mons. Forbes is an accomplished slack wire performer and juggler.

AFTER THE BATTLE.

A VETERAN'S STORY OF A TASSELED TURKISH FEZ.

The Growsome Incident in Which He Participated at the Second Battle of Manassas—A Brave Boy and His Dying Request.

"Whenever I see a tasseled Turkish fez," said a Confederate veteran whose attention had been attracted by a smoking cap of that pattern in a Canal street window, "I am reminded of a curious and rather growsome incident of my campaigning days. It was on the morning after the second battle of Manassas," he continued in response to a request for the story, "and several of us from my company had gone over to the field in the hope of picking up a few things that we badly needed and for which the dead had no further use—waterproofs, for instance, and sound canteens.

"During the previous day's engagement you may remember that a regiment of freshly recruited New York zouaves held the crest of a hill and were charged and almost annihilated by Hood's brigade. They were moved down like ripened grain and fell so thickly that their corpses literally carpeted the earth. I dare say it was as awful a slaughter, considering the number engaged, as occurred anywhere in the course of the war.

"Well, we hadn't gone very far when we came to this hill and began to get among the dead men. The poor fellows had been mustered into service less than a week before, and they were said to be the most gorgeously uniformed military troop ever organized. They wore scarlet Turkish trousers, blue jackets embroidered with gold bullion braid and purple fezes with long pendant tassels.

"Being just from the outposts, all this blue regalia was perfectly fresh and new, and somehow or other it added to the ghastliness of the spectacle on the hillside. The corpses were in all sorts of strange postures, and their fantastic costumes gave them an air of horrible grotesqueness that I couldn't begin to describe in words.

"However, to come to my point, I had picked up a fez to carry away as a relic and was about to leave the spot when I happened to notice a much handsomer specimen on the head of a little zouave stretched out, stiff and stark, a few yards away, with a handkerchief over his face. I stepped up to make a swap, but had barely touched the tassel when a low, sweet toned voice under the handkerchief said, 'Please don't!'

"For a moment," continued the veteran, "that unpleasant protest, coming from what I had supposed to be a corpse, made my hair bristle on my head. Then I lifted the handkerchief and was shocked to see the delicate, refined features of a boy not over 15. He was pale as death and evidently desperately wounded, but he looked at me calmly. 'My God,' I exclaimed, 'what a lad you are to be here! I'm afraid I'm dying unless I have help,' he replied. 'Do you think the surgeons will be around pretty soon?' 'The Lord knows!' I groaned, for the boy's courage touched me to the heart. 'Your surgeons have all run away, and we only have a few, with more wounded than they can attend to.' 'Then I guess all I can do is to lie here quietly and die,' he said in the same gentle voice. 'Can you get me a little water before you go?'

"I took his canteen and hurried down to a branch at the foot of the hill, where the first thing I saw, by the way, was the corpse of a zouave floating in a pool. I went up the stream far enough to get out of the horrible death zone, filled the canteen with pure water and was soon back at the boy's side. I gave him a drink, and he thanked me. 'Is there nothing else I can do?' I asked awkwardly, because I knew our company was under early marching orders that morning and that it would be impossible for me to linger much longer. 'Nothing at all, thank you,' he replied. 'No message to anybody?' 'No; nothing, thanks!'

"I turned away most reluctantly and had gone only a few yards when I heard his thin voice calling me back. 'Excuse me,' he said, 'but I want you to accept this as a present; I have banded me his fine purple fez. 'No, no,' I exclaimed, greatly embarrassed; 'I couldn't think of taking it. When I started to a little while ago, I thought you—you—' 'Thought I was dead, of course,' he interrupted. 'Well, I soon will be, and that other fez will do me just as well. Please put it on my head and take mine.' I saw that he would be hurt unless I did as he desired, so I took the fez and went away.

"In less than half an hour our company was on the march, and, needless to say, I never heard anything more of the little child zouave. He was badly wounded and undoubtedly died where I left him. I kept the fez a long time," added the veteran, "but it was finally lost, with other odds and ends, in the general confusion following the war. I'd give some money for it today!"—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

The Good Effects of Apple Eating.

The apple is such common fruit that few are familiar with its remarkable efficacious properties. Everybody ought to know that the very best thing they can do is to eat apples just before retiring for the night. The apple is an excellent brain food, because it has more phosphoric acid in easily digested shape than any other vegetable known. It excites the action of the liver, promotes sound and healthy sleep and thoroughly disinfects the mouth. That is not all. The apple agglutinates the surplus acids of the stomach, helps the kidney secretions and is one of the best preventives known of diseases of the throat.—Journal of Agriculture.

TIRED OF THE TRIP.

SO HE GOT OUT OF THE BALLOON BY THE JUMP ROUTE.

And Then When He Told the Eng-lishmen He Met What He Had Done They Considerately Carried Him Off to an Insane Asylum.

"I went up in a balloon once, and I never want to make such a trip again," said Colonel A. Noel Blakeman. "My experience as an aeronaut was in London," he continued, "and it would never have occurred but for a friend I chanced to meet there. He was going to make an ascent, and he persuaded me to accompany him.

"The balloon was a feature of some big exhibition, and every day it was inflated and made an ascent, with four or five passengers, in charge of an experienced aeronaut. There were about five in the party the day I took the trip. We got into the basket, which was boxed in quite high, then let the rope go, and we shot up about 3,000 feet. It was interesting to look down on the world and hear the noises of London streets coming from so far below. The balloon sailed along smoothly, and we drifted for about eight miles.

"It was when we tried to descend that the trouble began. The method was to throw out anchors as the balloon settled toward the earth. The aeronaut said that when one of these anchors caught firmly he would haul the balloon down to the tree in which the anchor was expected to become fastened. This would be done by winding in the rope on a winch in the car. We would be expected to climb out of the balloon into the tree, he said, and he would then take hold of the valve rope and, standing a safe distance away, open the valve, let the gas escape, and the big affair would collapse and sink. He informed us that we must get clear of the sinking folds, as they would come down fast, and if they caught and covered us we would be in an atmosphere of most poisonous gas.

"All this was very interesting, but we did not seem to be making very much progress toward the point where we would have to look out for the descending folds of the collapsing balloon. The anchors caught in a whole lot of trees, but they did not hold. One would get tangled in a tree, and then the balloon would swing far over, tilting the basket in which we were until it seemed that we would be spilled out. Then the anchor would break loose, and we would shoot up again.

"I became very tired of this and told the aeronaut that I thought it was time to bring the voyage to a conclusion. He told me if I did not like it I could jump out. At first I thought he was simply resentful of my remark, but he said he meant what he said.

"When the car tilted over again, you climb out on the edge," he said, "and let go. It will probably be a plovered field underneath us, and you won't get hurt."

"Well, I did as he suggested. When the anchor caught again, I climbed out and hung to the edge of the car. When I saw that the car was as low as it was likely to get, I let go. I dropped about 12 feet, and as he expected, a plovered field was below us.

"As soon as I dropped out the balloon, relieved of my weight, shot up in the air again and soared off. I walked to the nearest road and continued along it until I came to an inn.

"I asked the landlord how far it was to London, and he told me it was eight miles. I ordered a carriage to take me there, and while I was waiting the landlord asked me where I had come from.

"I took him to the door of the inn, and, pointing to the balloon, which was then sailing along about a quarter of a mile above the ground, I said, 'I jumped out of that!'

"The man looked at me in alarmed fashion, and after I had returned to the sitting room I noticed that several people peered through the window at me.

"Finally my four wheeler was ready, and I set off for London. After we had driven along for half an hour or so the coachman suddenly turned the horse in through a gate, and we drove into a big courtyard. I yelled to him and asked him what he meant, that I wanted to go straight to London, but he paid no attention and slowly circled the court. When he stopped on the other side, a man wearing glasses stuck his head in the carriage, scrutinizing me closely, pulled back, said something to the coachman, and we drove on to London.

"Finally we reached my lodgings, and when we did so the coachman jumped off the box, ran up the steps and as soon as his knock was answered asked if Mr. Blakeman lived there. The maid was just answering that I did when I reached the top of the steps and collared the fellow.

"What was that place you drove me into on our way to London? I asked him.

"It was a hirsane asylum, sir," he replied. "When you said you had jumped out of that balloon, we thought you were crazy and maybe you was a escaped patient from the asylum!"—Washington Post.

Realized His Own Madness.

"Now you are tired of me and abuse me," sobbed the young wife whose husband refused to breathe another word to take care of her pet dog. "Yet," she continued, "not two years ago you were just crazy to marry me."

"Yes," answered the complacent man bristling, "my friends told me so at the time, but I didn't realize it until after we were married."—Kansas City Star.

English Robbers.

Speaking of the early Plantagenet period, Mr. Henry, in his "History of Great Britain," remarks that the number of robbers was so great that the judges could not prevail upon the juries to find any of them guilty.

Even under the most rigorous administration of Edward III a numerous band of them assailed the town of Boston in 1275 at the time of the fair, set it on fire and carried off an immense booty in money and goods. Their leader, one Robert Chamberlain, a gentleman of great power and wealth, was taken, tried and executed, but he could not be prevailed upon to discover any of his accomplices. As the other robbers of this period were very numerous, so some of them were very cruel, and the character which one of their chiefs wore embroidered upon his coat in letters of silver might be applied to many others—"I am Captain Warner, commander of a troop of robbers, an enemy to God, without pity and without remorse." (Henry's "History of Great Britain," book 4, chapter 7.)—Gentleman's Magazine.

Benton.

When Thomas Hart Benton, the noted Missourian, wrote his famous work, "Thirty Years in the United States Senate," which every one praises and no one reads, his publishers, D. Appleton & Co., wrote to him asking how large a first edition should be printed. His reply was:

"Sir, they can ascertain from the last census how many persons there are in the United States who can read, sir." And that was the only suggestion he would ever condescend to make.

Benton was massive in body and muscular. No man in public life was his equal in physical strength, endurance and courage. In reference to a quarrel in the senate he once said: "I never quarrel, sir. I sometimes fight, sir, and when Benton fights, sir, there is always a funeral, sir."

Benton was studiously devoted to the Union. He broke with many friends in consequence. He bore the cognomen "Old Bullion" because of his support of bimetalism.

"The Bride at Last Said 'Obey.'"

In telling about "Some People I Have Married" in Ladies' Home Journal the Rev. D. M. Steele says: "Being an Episcopalian, I always use the formal printed service of the prayer book. In this the greatest stickler is 'Obey.' One day a couple came to me, bringing as witnesses the parents of both bride and groom. Everything proceeded smoothly to the point 'love, honor and obey,' when the bride refused to say the last. I repeated it and waited. Again she refused, and I shut up my book."

"Then there was a scene. They talked it over, and the more seriously they argued and discussed the more stubbornly she refused. The parents became angry, the groom excited and the bride hysterical. To humor her, he joined in the request to have me leave it out. But I liked the fellow and decided that a little sternness from me in the present might be a favor to him in the future. So I told them I had no authority to change it and would not do so. I tried to show the foolishness of her objection, but it was no use."

"Finally I said to him: 'Well, this household must have a head somewhere. I will leave it out for her if you will say it.' Then it was his time to refuse, which he did. He gathered up his hat and started for the door, when, presto change, he sprang after him, led him back by the hand, looked meekly up at him and said 'It'

ACQUITTED.

Charges Against Kiley
Not Sustained.

Did Not Commend Attack on President McKinley.

Upon charges preferred by the police department against Patrolman Maurice F. Kiley, for conduct and language unbecoming an officer, a hearing was held at City Hall, last Wednesday morning at nine o'clock, before Mayor Pickard and Chief Tarbox.

Officer Kiley was represented by Jesse C. Ivy, Esq., and City Solicitor Slocum was present to advise the Mayor.

The witnesses were Engineer Frank E. Judkins and Driver Benj. F. Tripp of the fire department, Sergt. Thomas C. Clay and Patrolman W. E. Dearborn of the police force and Mr. Chas. A. Peakes of Newtonville.

The gist of the testimony was that Officers Kiley and Dearborn and Driver Tripp were on a settee outside the Newton police station just prior to roll call on Friday afternoon, Sept. 6th. Engineer Judkins, between whom and Kiley there was reported to have been considerable hard feeling, is stated to have come around the corner and said that McKinley had been shot. It is said that Tripp and Dearborn had heard rumors of the matter before but that Kiley had not. Kiley's reply to Judkins' statement is variously testified to as follows:

Judkins—"He said it was a damn good thing; said a lot more out there ought to have the same dose."

By Tripp—"It is a good thing and there were lots of others ought to receive the same medicine."

By Kiley—"Too bad it is not someone else who is shot."

Dearborn testifies that some conversation or remark unheard by him brought out the statement from Kiley that it would be a good thing if a lot more should get the same dose.

Conflicting statements are also given as to what followed, two witnesses saying that Judkins then remarked to Kiley, "What's the matter with you," or "What do you mean?" Judkins himself saying that he went away without making any remark.

Kiley then reported at roll call and went on his beat as usual. While pulling a duty call from a box on Crafts street, he was approached by Mr. Peakes, who inquired the latest news of the President. In the conversation regarding the assassin, which followed, Mr. Peakes testifies that I suggested it would be a good thing to lynch him at once. (He Kiley) said a man who would do such a thing as that should be burned at the stake.

Sergt. Clay testified to Kiley's good record, the saving of the life of another officer, and said the only complaint against Kiley was made by Judkins, who said that Kiley disturbed his slumbers by early morning work about the police station.

Kiley's testimony was to the effect that he thought Judkins was attempting to jolly him, and without any idea that the statement was true, had intimated in return that it was too bad that some one else (referring to Judkins) had not been shot. Kiley also said that there was some hard feelings between himself and Judkins. He had voted for McKinley on both occasions.

In summing up the case in his usual clever style, Mr. Ivy frankly stated that if there had been any testimony to show that Kiley had, either in word or deed, approved of the assassination of the President, he should be immediately discharged, but he claimed that Kiley's real sentiments were expressed to Mr. Peakes, and that his words at the police station were meant for Judkins, with whom he was not friendly. He called attention to the fact that Kiley had voted for President McKinley and that he had no motive whatever for making the statements credited to him. Strong emphasis was laid on the conversation with Mr. Peakes, and upon Kiley's good record as an officer and citizen.

The decision was given out late Wednesday afternoon and read at roll call. It is as follows:

"In the complaint of Fred M. Mitchell vs Maurice F. Kiley the following is the finding: That the charges of the complaint are not sustained. While the evidence is not conclusive, it is fair that the accused should have the benefit of any reasonable doubt, and for this reason the finding is that the charges are not sustained."

Suicide of Geo. W. Pedrick

Despondency because of business failures led George W. Pedrick of Waban road, Waban, to kill himself early Wednesday morning. He was found dead in an Atlantic avenue hotel, Boston, shortly after noon, Wednesday. A bullet from a large caliber revolver had pierced his brain.

Mr. Pedrick was 65 years old. He made his home with his brother-in-law, C. V. Campbell of 25 Congress street, Boston, who lives on Waban road. He left home as was his custom, early Tuesday morning, saying he was going to Boston. Nothing was heard from him until Wednesday afternoon, when Mr. Campbell was notified that he had committed suicide.

Mr. Pedrick was formerly engaged in the cash and blind business. He had met with financial reverses and of late had showed signs of depression. This is the only motive suggested by relatives for his act. He leaves no family. Funeral services were held this morning.

DECLINES.

Mayor Pickard Refuses
Second Term

On Account of His Physical Condition.

West Newton, Sept. 9, 1901.

To the Voters of Newton:

After a careful consideration of the matter I desire to announce at this early day that I am not a candidate for renomination for the office of Mayor of this city.

Much to my regret, my physical condition is such that I do not deem it advisable to attempt to discharge the duties of the office for a longer period than my present term.

Called to the position by a unanimity which is in itself a source of pride, it has been a pleasure to serve you, and in thus declining to be a candidate for renomination, I take the opportunity of again expressing my gratitude for your suffrages and my sincere appreciation of your kindness and forbearance.

Edward L. Pickard.

President McKinley Shot.

There was never a greater arousal of widest public sympathy and deepest sentiment akin to sorrow, than that which has filled this city since the news of the attempted assassination of President McKinley.

The first days were the darkest of all. From the time the first report reached Newton men and women, boys and girls, eagerly sought later news that they might be reassured of the possibilities of the saving of the president's life. And the feeling in this city was but as one voice in a chorus of millions.

With the fervence of united prayer the citizens gathered at their places of worship, irrespective of creed, last Sunday, and prayed for the restoration of President McKinley's health and the preservation of the union.

Older people recalled the times when Lincoln and Garfield were felled by the hands of assassins. To them the shock of last Friday was equally as great.

But of all the public signs of grief none were more impressive than the manifestations at the churches. Many pastors denounced anarchy, others asked forgiveness for the perpetrator of the awful crime, while all counseled prayer and supplication.

BOYLSTON STREET HEARING.

A petition from the Newton Highlands Improvement Society for a hearing on the matter of street railway location in Boylston street was received and immediately granted.

Mr. Wm. B. Wood, president of the society, briefly urged that concessions be made to the street railway company in order that the south side of the city may receive the benefit resulting therefrom. Mr. Wood then called upon the following gentlemen to speak:

Mr. John E. Titus read a letter from Mr. Otis Pettie in favor of the project and then said that he believed that the city could make no better investment of $30,000 or $40,000, and receive a boulevard worth $140,000. He also urged the board to treat the south side justly.

Mr. S. M. Jackson believed that the city's experience with Commonwealth avenue should not be slighted and said that if Boylston street was widened, land values would be put up by the assessors.

Mr. John Ward said the city has received a great advantage from the widening of Washington and Tremont streets and from Commonwealth avenue. He wished the south side to be given as much as the north and central parts. He saw no reason why such onerous restrictions should be placed on this company and thought $100,000 was their fair proportion. He believed that if present opportunity was neglected, Boylston street would always remain as it is today. Mr. Frank Fanning in a clear cut speech stated that it was the unanimous wish of the Upper Falls to have this road go. He called attention to the geographical features of the village which prevented easy access by steam roads and said they were dependent upon the electric.

Mr. Lewis P. Everett believed that the matter was now boiled down so that there was only a difference of from $80,000 to $100,000 between the city and the company.

Mr. H. E. Locke believed in the board of aldermen and wished them to make the best possible bargain. He thought the city would get immediate returns, from increased valuations. Mr. Locke spoke in glowing terms of the natural beauties of the Upper Falls and of the great attraction of Echo Bridge, and wished that the approach to be worthy of it. He believed the whole city would get the benefit.

Mr. W. M. Mick said his section of Oak Hill was in great need of transportation to the schools and to Boston. He said that they paid from $7000 to $8000 in taxes more than were expended in that district for schools, street repairs and police, and humorously described the manner in which these departments were administered. He believed they had claim as they had cheerfully contributed to every improvement in the city, and there had been no tax sale to speak of in their neighborhood. He thought it an excellent investment for the city.

Boylston street at present is in a shameful and dangerous condition, and thought it should be drained in any event.

Rev. D. A. Morehouse believed this to be a critical time for the south side and thought these privileges should be granted.

Mr. W. M. Noble, president of the Newton Centre Improvement Association thought the conditions imposed to be unusual and unreasonable.

The Society believed there was danger that from too small a cause, a great benefit to the city will be lost. He called attention to the fact that the street railway taking the poorer fares in the city was asked to pay the highest cost. He criticized the budget of $40,000, land damages, believed it would not amount to more than $25,000, and hoped the board would not fear the action of Middlesex county in the matter. In return for this amount the city will receive an increase in valuation of $250,000, yielding $4,600 a year in taxes.

Mr. George N. Towle said they were bound to have a railway on Boylston street and if the present terms were not accepted, poorer terms will be taken later. He hoped the happy mean would be reached and believed his section of Dudley street would be settled in consequence.

Mr. George May said that land values, at present $115,000, would be doubled in a few years.

Mr. S. W. Jones said they wanted the city to make the best possible terms but beyond everything they wanted the road.

Mr. Darius Cobb said he had noticed that the extension of electric roads had built up the neighborhood, and he drew an amusing picture of how Parker and Dedham streets would look some five years hence.

In response to various questions Mr. F. Shaw said that his company had made no change in its proposition of $83,000 towards street construction, and $10,000 for land damages. He also said that they had not sold out their interest in the company and would build the road if the location was granted.

Alderman Weeks then said that no location had been granted in Newton during the last few years without compensation. The land damages in this case are a serious difficulty. The company says it is unable to obtain any statements about them. The alderman believed the citizens had a duty in this matter as well as the city and asked those present to name their terms.

Mr. Titus said his house was near the street and he had asked to have the line changed a little. His damages would be about $100 if his wall and steps were rebuilt. He also spoke for his neighbors and said the section was willing to act fairly in the matter.

Mr. Fanning said his house set very high from the street and would be way up in the air when the street was brought nearer. He was unable to say what his damages would be but would accept whatever would be awarded by three disinterested parties.

Mr. Darius Cobb said his home was owned by his wife and he was very careful not to interfere. He thought, however, that his wife would accept Alderman Weeks' judgment in the matter.

Mr. Richard P. Kerrivan said he would give the necessary land from his estate.

Alderman Hutchinson called the attention of the audience to the fact that the proposition left the entire element of risk with the city. He said that estimates are not infallible, and that the company confines itself to a definite proposition. He believed that the general feeling of the board was favorable to building of the road.

And at 9.23 o'clock the hearing was closed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

The following reports were severally accepted:

AUDITING—Relative to approval of bills for July and August.

JOURNAL—Recommending approval of records.

STREET LIGHTS—Recommending leave to withdraw on petition for pole location on Lenox street, and on petition for street lights on Austin Needham and Oak streets.

The following committee reports were received:

FINANCE—Recommending certain grants for September; recommending $200 additional for Indigent Soldiers and Sailors; and relative to sewer house connection receipts.

PUBLIC PROPERTY—Recommending $9400 for new police station at Newton.

STREET LIGHTS—Favorable to granting New England Telephone Co. pole locations on Washington street, Ward 4, and to locating street lights on Berkeley street, Penn. avenue and Dudley street.

Under unfinished business, President Bailey ruled that the notice of intention to move a reconsideration of the order granting the Wellesley & Boston Street Railway Co. a location through Waban filed by Alderman Wood was unnecessary, as the rules of the board covered the matter in full.

On motion of Alderman Mellen, the order was reconsidered and after a motion to lay the matter on the table, had been withdrawn after a brief explanation by Alderman Trowbridge, it was recommitted to the street railway committee.

The president also ruled that the notice of intention to move a reconsideration of the order granting the Boston & Worcester Street Railway Co. a location on Boylston street, filed by Alderman Norris was not in order under the rules.

Upon motion of Alderman Norris, the rules were suspended and the Boylston street order reconsidered.

Alderman Lyman offered an amendment which was turned over to the city solicitor to draft and the matter temporarily postponed.

The following orders were then adopted:

Taking land and authorizing sewer construction in Forest street, Ward 5; making grants of $38,766.36 for certain September payments; appropriating $300 additional for Indigent Soldiers and Sailors; authorizing city treasurer to credit receipts on account of special sewer connections to that appropriation; granting N. E. Tel. & Tel. Co. pole locations on Washington street, Ward 4; authorizing location of street lights on Berkeley street, Dudley street and Pennsylvania avenue, and appropriating $1,937.45 for interest on permanent loans, Washington street and sewer bonds.

Orders for erection of a new police station at Newton and authorizing issue of $9400 therefore were referred to the finance committee.

RESOLUTIONS.

Alderman Wardwell in a neat little speech then offered the following resolutions which were unanimously adopted by a rising vote:

WHEREAS by the act of an assassin an attempt has been made to take the life of the President, thus depriving the country of its Chief Magistrate, and this while in the free exercise of his pleasure and duty as a citizen of the United States,

RESOLVED, that this Board in its respect for individuals and as representatives of this City expresses its abhorrence of a deed so fraught with danger and disaster to personal rights and privileges and destructive of legally constituted authority.

RESOLVED, that our warmest sympathy is hereby extended to the President and his wife.

RESOLVED, that we hail with the greatest pleasure and gratitude every indication of recovery, and entertain the hope of complete restoration and continued ability to execute the manifold will of the people.

Alderman Weeks offered the following resolution which were also unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS it is reported in the public press, and is common report, that Patrolman Maurice F. Kiley of the Newton police force did, on the evening of Friday, Sept. 6th, during a discussion of the attempted assassination of the President, give expression to the words: "It is a good thing; he was no use, and there are lots more who ought to get the same medicine," or some similar seditious sentiment.

RESOLVED, that His Honor, the Mayor, be requested to give this case prompt investigation and if Patrolman Kiley be found guilty of the sentiments stated, it is the opinion of this Board that the good name of the City of Newton and a public sentiment abhorrent of such views, demands that he be summarily dismissed from the police force.

NONANTUM SQUARE.

In response to questions from Alderman Hubbard, President Bailey stated that the petition for relief of street railway congestion in Nonantum square had been considered by the street railway committee, and a hearing had been granted. The company said the use of the Watertown car barn as a terminal was impossible and relief could only be had by reducing the service. The committee believed that congestion existed and had authorized the chairman to negotiate with the company. The petitioners had been asked to suggest a remedy but had failed to do so and the matter was in that very unsatisfactory shape.

Alderman Hubbard then introduced an order withdrawing the matter from the street railway committee and referring it to a select committee of the aldermen from Wards One and Seven.

Alderman Hubbard said he did not desire to reflect on the street railway committee but he believed the conditions should be changed and that the aldermen from that district were more conversant with the matter than the regular committee.

Alderman Fisher believed that the mayor and street commissioner had power to clear the streets of any obstructions and asked that it be referred to the mayor. The order was then defeated by a hand vote, four to eight.

BOYLSTON STREET.

Alderman Lyman had the Boylston street matter again taken up, and stated that in substance his amendment eliminated the expense of drainage by the company, and required them to pay at least $15,000 towards the land damages and one half of any excess above $30,000. Thus bringing the matter down to practically the same basis as 1899.

Alderman Weeks said that the city would then assume the cost of drainage about $22,000, and a portion of the land damages. He did not believe that the action of 1899 had any bearing on the matter, as conditions have changed greatly since that time. This is a new and the most important question of the year. It is our duty to obtain every possible concession from the company. He was willing to accept the company's statements as to the maximum amount of capitalization they could use for this purpose. The board has changed some of the prior conditions relating to rails and surfacing. He believed, however, that this amendment was the city's limit, and hoped that the abutters would see the reasonableness of the matter. He deemed it a bad precedent for the city to enter upon any matter where the amount of cost is indefinite, and only the magnitude and value to the city of this enterprise had persuaded him to favor it. Alderman Weeks also favored placing the cost of the city in the budget provided $30,000 was the maximum land damages.

Alderman Lothrop was in hearty sympathy with the road but could not favor having the city assume any unknown sum. He would favor the assumption of the drainage item by the city in the annual budget.

As the City Solicitor did not wish to draft the proposed amendment with out further consideration the whole matter was referred to the street railway committee and at 10.35 p. m., the board adjourned.

A Certain Cure for Dysentery and Diarrhoea.

"Some years ago I was one of a party that intended making a long bicycle trip," says F. L. Taylor, of New Albany, Bradford County, Pa. "I was taken suddenly with diarrhoea, and was about to give up the trip, when editor Ward, of the Laceyville Messenger, suggested that I take a dose of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. I purchased a bottle and took two doses, one before starting and one on the route. I made the trip successfully and never felt any ill effect. Again last summer I was almost completely run down with an attack of dysentery. I bought a bottle of this same remedy and this time one dose cured me." Sold by all druggists.

Patrolman Charged and Suspended.

In addition to the general expression of sorrow over the attempt upon the life of President McKinley at Buffalo, last Friday, there has been considerable sensation because of an alleged utterance of a police patrolman who is said to have openly declared that he believed the sad event to be "a good thing." As reported, the patrolman, who is Maurice F. Kiley of division 2, was one of a group at engine 1 house on Washington street, about 5.40 last Friday evening, when some one informed the party of the attempted assassination. Kiley is alleged to have said, "It's a good thing. He's no curly use. There's a lot more that ought to get the same medicine." It is a fact that some one reported the case to Chief Tarbox, who found Kiley on his route and immediately suspended him, charged with conduct unbecoming an officer. Kiley, it is said, says he meant nothing by such a remark. He claims he had heard nothing of the occurrence at Buffalo and that thinking the speaker might have meant it as a joke, said what he did. Kiley has always borne a good record as an officer and his friends are disinclined to believe his utterance was meant to be disloyal or treasonable.

This remedy expels malarial, kills disease germs and purifies the blood; aids digestion, regulates liver, kidneys and bowels, cures constipation, dyspepsia, nervous diseases, kidney troubles, female complaints; gives perfect health. ## Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

THE POINT OF VIEW.

The citizens, the aldermen and the street railway men are each looking at the Boylston street franchise from their own standpoint.

The citizens see only the very great advantage in cheap and rapid transportation to Boston, and the anticipated boom in real estate values in consequence. A few of the abutments are acting the dog in the manger part, and are really the most serious obstacle to the compromise between the city and company, which is hovering in the balance.

The street railway company views the matter as a business incident in securing valuable privileges for a through line between Boston and Worcester, and are determined to obtain it at the lowest possible cost.
One feature of the matter from their point of view is the attitude of the selectmen of Wellesley, where a franchise is yet to be obtained. These gentlemen have so far simply endorsed the Newton conditions, and while the company might be willing to accept the terms in Newton alone, their extension through Wellesley means quite an additional expense. The attitude of the railroad commissioners who must pass on the franchise and on the capitalization of the company is also important to Shaw and his associates.

The aldermen view the matter from a broader standpoint. They recognize the value to the city of a street railway in that section, and the advantages accruing from boulevard construction in the way of increased real estate and other values. But they also have to consider the resources of the city, in determining whether or not it can afford to expend anywhere from $21,000 to $50,000 within the next year, and the future macadamizing of the road beds at a further cost of $38,000. If the matter is favorably considered by the aldermen, the question is at once raised as to how the city's share of the expense is to be met. The money can either be raised by the sale of notes or bonds or it can be charged directly into the tax levy. The debt limit of the city is approximately $275,000, out of which the two new school houses at Auburndale and Newton Centre will have to be paid. This will leave a margin hardly large enough for emergencies and which should not be touched for a matter like Boylston street. To raise the necessary amount through the tax levy will probably, unless the most economy is practised in every department, retain the present tax rate, for another year, a condition which will not be relished by the average taxpayer.

It will thus be seen that the question from the aldermanic point of view is not easy of solution, although we are confident that the board will endeavor to reconcile all the conflicting interests for the ultimate advantage of the city.

THE SCHOOLS.

The second Monday in September is an important event in the lives of the children. To the teachers also it marks the beginning of the year's work with old associations to be renewed and new friendships to be formed.

In the present instance the roll of teachers shows many and important changes. Some of our best teachers have been induced to leave the city by the offer of better positions elsewhere, while others have been dropped from the service from other considerations.

The public has been fully informed of the failure of the school board to retain Miss Perkins in the Wade school at the Upper Falls, after thirty-five years of faithful service.
A political issue will undoubtedly be made of this action the coming fall.
Not so much publicity has been given the retirement of Miss Swain, after thirty years' efficient service at the Pierce school in West Newton, but the circumstances are very much the same.

Another case in which the parents of the Underwood district are interested is the resignation of Miss Blackwell after seventeen years in that school. Miss Blackwell's work has always been up to the mark and perfectly satisfactory to her superiors. Her firmness and kindness to the children combined with a conscientious devotion to duty causes her resignation on account of a physical infirmity to be universally regretted in the district.
Other changes have been made,
which have caused more or less local comment, but the above are the more important and worthy of more than passing remark.

THE MAYORALTY.

Mayor Pickard having announced his intention to retire at the end of his present term, the friends of Alderman John W. Weeks of West Newton have secured his consent to be a candidate for the Republican nomination.

Captain Weeks is now serving his third year as an alderman and is in close touch with city affairs. He will bring to the office of mayor, an intimate knowledge of municipal conditions, combined with an experience in handling large business matters, which will be of great benefit to the city.

His candidacy will be received with favor by the business men and heavy taxpayers, who place absolute confidence in his business ability and sound judgment.

THE CASE OF KILEY.

From the evidence found in our news columns, presented at the recent police investigation, it seems fair to assume that the remarks of Patrolman Kiley regarding the attempt upon the life of President McKinley, while capable of the construction given them at that time, were intended by Kiley to apply to his informant and not to the news he gave.

The officer's fine record and general reputation also made it easy to accept the finding of the Mayor of not guilty.
Mayor Pickard's declaration to accept the customary second term with which Newton usually honors its chief magistrate, comes as a great surprise to the city, although it was realized that his health has been precarious since his serious illness of last spring. His letter states the fact frankly, and as the duties of the office are a severe strain to a man in the soundest of health, it is undoubtedly a wise decision on his part.
His declaration will be received with regret as his official life has been marked with conscientious and painstaking work, combined with a charm of personal manner which has made him very popular.

The entire city will join in wishing him a long life of happiness and health when he retires from the City Hall.

ating from scarlet fever, were discovered.

Cheap Rates to the Provinces.

The Plant Line announce Autumn Excursions to Halifax, Hawkesbury and Charlottetown; good air steamer from September 10th to October 10th and returning within thirty days from date of departure. The round trip rates are one dollar higher than the fare one way. These excursions are very popular and justly so, for there is no time like the autumn to visit the Provinces. The climate at this season is delightful, and the sail along the Nova Scotia coast and through the Straits of Canso is well worth the time and expense. There will also be many, no doubt, take advantage of these rates to attend the great Provincial Exhibition which opens in Halifax September 14.
Tickets and all information at Plant Line office, 290 Washington street, and Lewis Wharf, 20 Atlantic avenue, Boston.

The fiftieth anniversary of the Channing Religious Society will be observed next Sunday morning at 10.30 o'clock with an elaborate program, including addresses by former pastors, the pastor-elect, Rev. Adelbert L. Hudson, and a solo by Mr.
Geo. H. Remele, an especial feature of the service will be the anniversary hymn written by Mrs. Samuel L.

Powers.

The arrangements are in charge of a committee of which Mr. C. Bowditch Coffin is chairman and Mr. Frank H.
Burt secretary. A full account of the ## Norumbega Park.

The month of September as usual

Next week in the Rustic Theatre the vaudeville attraction will be the London Vaudeville Company, a star feature of which will be Solaret, the famous fire dancer. The other features on the bill will be of equal strength.

The Parisian illusions in the Mysterious Chale continue to attract big audiences at all times of the day and evening. The Zoological Garden is always a prime feature of the Park's multitudinous attractions. So it is with the Restaurant, the Casino, Electric Fountain, Indian Colony, Merry-go-round, canoeing and boating on the Charles, etc.

another column.

Communication.

To the Editor of the Graphic:

In a recent issue of the "Newton Graphic" there is an interesting account of a meeting of the Massachusetts Association of Boards of Health, at which a paper was read on personal cleanliness as a means of checking the spread of communicable diseases in the public schools, and editorial comment as follows:

"We publish this report in full in view of the recent agitation for a daily medical inspection of schools, as we feel assured that thorough work by the teachers along the lines suggested by Dr. Chapin would produce far better results, and without the heavy expenses involved by the plan now under consideration by the city government."

It will doubtless be found that already it is the practice of teachers in the Newton schools to explain to scholars the need of personal cleanliness, and to enforce it as far as lies in their power—for uncleanly children are sent home for this reason—but it must be obvious that the important work to be accomplished by a proper daily medical inspection cannot be satisfactorily accomplished in this way, although the teachers' influence for cleanliness will be an invaluable help.

As well might we expect to do away with our Police Department by merely sending a copy of the laws and Police Regulations to the residents of the City, and expect thereby to protect the lives, property, and rights of citizens.

The policeman not only protects the lives, property and rights of the people, and enforces the laws and ordinances of the city, but by his presence exercises a control and moral influence—which is equally potent—so a reasonable daily inspection of the schools (meaning thereby only the examination of children whose appearance indicate illness, and possible contagious disease), should prove an effective safeguard.

It needs no argument to establish the proposition that the earliest possible isolation of a contagious case is of vital importance, and the greatest possible preventive of the spread of contagious diseases.

A teacher may notice a child with a bad cold, or having other appearance of being out of sorts, yet would hesitate to send the child home on mere suspicion, but if an examination by the physician disclosed symptoms of diphtheria, scarlet, fever, typhoid, or other contagious disease, a statement from the doctor would make it the duty of the teacher to send the child home with an explanatory note, which would also satisfy the parents.

Does Newton need this medical inspection? Let us glance at the facts, taking for example the most dreadful of all contagious diseases, diphtheria. There were in 1898, 39 cases; in 1899, 183 cases; in 1900, 361 cases. In this last year, of the entire population of Newton, about 34,000, there was one case in ninety-five, or approximately one case in every twenty families. This includes an epidemic of diphtheria in the Franklin school, West Newton, of forty-two cases. Last year twenty-eight persons died of diphtheria, all but one under fifteen years of age. Last year during the school vacation there was but little diphtheria, only five cases in July and seven in August.

Upon the reopening of the schools there were thirty-six cases in September, and forty-two in October, and in October and November occurred ten of the twenty-eight deaths. As we repeat the experience this year through neglect of the City Authorities?

It has been said that medical inspection will involve the City in great expense, but if it should, are we to reckon lives in dollars and cents?

There is, however, good reason to believe that it would prove a saving rather than an expense to the City.

In their annual report the Health Board in discussing the matter says: "It is believed that in the end the expense to the City would be less than under the present system." Estimates of the probable cost are variously put at from $1500 to $2500. Last year the City paid on account of contagious diseases:

To the Newton Hospital $13,045.57

Expended by Health Board 1,622.80

Total, $14,668.37

It is stated that in other cities contagious diseases have been reduced one-half through daily medical inspection—now suppose we call it one-quarter, and how does the account stand?

One-quarter of present cost $3,667.09

Highest estimated cost of medical inspection 2,501.00

Saving to the City in one year $1,166.09

It is the old, old case of "an ounce of prevention vs. a pound of cure" and it would seem the wiser plan to spend $2,000 or $2,500 for prevention and thereby save a much larger sum spent by the City for the cure and care of its contagious cases, rather than continue the present "cart before the horse" system, especially as many lives can be saved annually that are now needlessly sacrificed.

In a later editorial on this subject the "Graphic" says: "Our correspondent's letter on medical inspection of schools still ignores the fact that it is a teacher's, not a physician's examination."

A very pertinent reply to this assertion of medical inspection is that it has been carried on with wonderful success in Boston, Chicago and other cities, where by "teachers' examination" contagious diseases have been reduced about one-half. Furthermore, the details of the work would be in the hands of the Board of Health and the School Board, so it might reasonably be expected that they would accomplish something better than had been done theretofore in other cities, less favored in many ways than our own City.

Yours truly,
Charles F. Shirley.

A Communication.

Mr. Editor—Allow me to speak a few words in favor of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I suffered for three years with the bronchitis and could not sleep at night. ## A Last Resource.

A lady was recently reading to her young son the story of a little fellow whose father was taken ill and died, after which he set himself diligently to work to assist in supporting himself and his mother. When she had finished the story, she said:

"Now, Tommy, if pa were to die, wouldn't you work to keep mamma?"

"Why, no," said the little chap, not relishing the idea of work. "What for? Ain't we got a good house to live in?"

"Oh, yes, my dear," said the mother, "but we can't eat the house, you know."

"Well, ain't we got plenty of things in the pantry?" continued the young hopeful.

"Certainly, dear," replied the mother, "but they would not last long, and what then?"

"Well, ma," said the young incorrigible after thinking a moment, "ain't there enough to last till you get another husband?"

Ma gave it up.—London Answers.

Immediately Suspicious.

"Why did you terminate your interview with that professional politician so abruptly?" asked the confidential man.

"He made me suspicious at the outset," said Senator Borghum. "I don't care how much prevarication my assistants use toward other people, but I want them to be frank and honest with me. The first thing that man did was to tell me a falsehood. He said he was working from disinterested motives and didn't want money."—Washington Star.

Soapstone Dessert.

The tribes on the coast of British Columbia hold a festival in the autumn, the crowning item of which is the parading of a few spoonfuls of a bowl of soapstone.

They gather in the dingy huts, which are hung with the staple food—dried salmon. For light they stick into the ground, bend downward, a silvery fish about five inches long, set fire to the tail, and they have a torch, for the fish burns steadily.

After eating of various unsavory foods there comes the great treat. This is a bowl of a frothy, soapy mixture, obtained by crushing in a not overclean manner the soapstone, or soap berries, and squeezing out the juice. This is as much like soapstone as it is possible to conceive. The natives slip it from spoons of black wood, neatly carved, of which they think a great deal.

Twenty Lost Gold Mines.

There are at least 20 lost gold mines in various parts of the world. Many of them have yielded rich ores and they have been deserted and entirely lost.

There is one in the north of the Transvaal, for instance, that was discovered by accident in the eighties by two Englishmen. The finders had encamped one night and had, as they thought, securely tethered their horses when they suddenly heard a loud neigh from one of the animals and a moment later saw them both racing away apparently in the greatest terror.

Soon after dawn they were up and after an hour's tramp found one of the poor beasts lying on the ground with a broken leg. In its struggles it had kicked up the ground and had exposed rich gold quartz only a few inches below the surface.

The two men marked the spot and returned to the district a month later to start work on the mine. But in spite of all their efforts they could not find the place, and to this day the mine has not been rediscovered.

In the late seventies there was tremendous excitement in California when a prospector described a gold mine he had found. A party soon prepared to set out, with the discoverer of the mine as guide, but the mine has never been discovered, though thousands of dollars have been spent in prospecting for it.—Stray Stories.

Time to Leave.

The late D'Oyly Carte always safeguarded himself by refusing to see any one who had not an appointment or stated his or her business on a printed form supplied to his office. Alfred Cellier used to tell a delightful story in this respect. He had a manservant, a Swiss Italian, and one day, having been invited to dine with Mr. and Mrs. Carte on Adelphi terrace and forgotten the time, he sent down his benchman to learn the hour of the repast. This was about 10 in the morning. The day went on, and no emissary appeared till past 5 in the evening, when the benchman crept wearily in.

"Where have you been, you rascal?" asked Cellier indignantly. "Ab, sare," replied the poor fellow, "I go Mistare Carte. I go in room. A gentleman 'e come and say, 'What name?' I tell him and say, 'I want see Mistare Carte.' He say, 'All in good time; wait for your name; sit down.' I sit down. Lots gentlemen and ladies. I wait, I wait, I wait. I get on and do do do, but still I wait, I wait, I wait. Den at last I hear my name. I go in beetel room. Gentleman 'e say, 'Vat voice?' I say, 'I not know.' 'E say, 'Den what come here for?' I say, 'I want know vat time Mistare Carte 'ave dinner?' Den 'e sare, and I come 'ome."

"Henry IX."

It is interesting to recall that, just as Edward VII of England chose his second baptismal name as the one by which he wished to be designated when he mounted the throne, so likewise his great-uncle, William Henry, would have preferred to be known as Henry IX. One of the reasons for this preference was the desire to establish lawful right to a title which had already been arrogated by the cardinal of York, the last of the Stuart pretenders. When the question, however, came up for discussion in the privy council, the latter decided in favor of King William IV. This story was told by the king himself to Miss Helen Lloyd, the governess of his children. He added that the privy council was moved to this choice partly by fear of exciting the superstitious fears of the populace, who still bore in their memory a prophecy dating from the seventeenth century, which runs as follows:

Henry the Eighth pulled down monks and their cells;
Henry the Ninth shall pull down bishops and bells.

—Literary Era.

Bismarck's Philosophy of Life.

With dutiful trust in God, dig in the spurs and let life, like a wild horse, take you flying over hedge and ditch, resolved to break your neck, and yet fearless, inasmuch as you must some time part from all that is dear to you on earth, though not forever. If grief is near, well, let him come on, but until he arrives do not merely look bright and blessed, but be it, too, and when sorrow comes you bear it with dignity that is to say, with submission and hope.—Love Letters of Prince Bismarck.

Grandpa's Pet.

A little boy was sitting on his grandfather's knee, talking about various things, when grandpa pulled out his watch.

"Grandpa, when you die will you leave that watch for me?" said the boy.

"Well, I don't know—yes, I guess I will," retorted the old gentleman.

"Well, grandpa, how soon are you going to die?"—Columbus Dispatch.

A Tougher Rail.

"Excuse me," said the citizen of the plains, "but didn't we ride you out of this town on a rail some ten years ago?"

"Believe you did," responded the fearless barstomer.

"Well, look out this time."

"Oh, I am used to traveling by rail."

"That may be, stranger, but we only have barb wire fences out here now."

Philadelphia Record.

To make an excellent soap out of the scraps and broken pieces that come from the soap dishes in bedrooms and kitchens, drop them into an old tin can, and when it is full dissolve three ounces of powdered borax in two quarts of warm water, and stir till the soap is melted. When cold, it will form a jelly. This borax soap is excellent for cleaning and does not fade articles washed in it.

JOHN ADAMS' WIFE.

A Letter From Abigail Adams—The Vice President's Function.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 6, 1797.

Dear Sir—I received your letter of Nov. 24 by the post of yesterday. With respect to the notes you write me about, I wish you to do by them as you would by your own, as I do not want at present either principle or interest. I think it would be most for my interest to do by them as you propose. The method you mention, of adding to the outhouse so as to give me a dairy room, I like very much and would leave it to your judgment. I think it would be best to have it large enough to take of a closet that cold victuals, etc., may not be mixt in with dairy affairs. I should be glad to have it completed if possible before I return in the spring, but the winter has set in with great violence here, and the rivers are already frozen up, so that I fear we shall not have a chance of getting any cheese here.

Congress are but just getting into business, and the vice president is not yet arrived to sit six months together. Regulating debates, moderating warmth and reading papers is a laborious task and what, I fancy, the present V. P. does not like so well as rocking in his pivot chair or amusing himself with the vibration of a pendulum. I have never yet seen the southern man, Washington excepted, who could bear close application for any length of time. What a ringing would have been in all the Jacobinical prayers from one end of the United States to the other if somebody else had done so!

We are all well. The cold weather has entirely put a stop to the yellow fever, and no person would now suppose that such a calamity had ever befallen the city. The synod recommended a day of fasting and prayer. The difference between this place and N. England was this: Being recommended by a body of Presbyterian ministers, none of the church clergy would join in it. Every shop in the city was open as usual, and a very small proportion of the inhabitants attended worship. Business and pleasure went on as usual.

Remember me to Mrs. Tufts and all other friends. From your ever affectionate ABIGAIL ADAMS.

THE BRITISH TOURIST.

He Was Pleasantly Surprised by the Train Boy's Attention.

The British tourist sat in the car and gazed idly across the bleak prairies. He felt a slight touch and, looking around, found that a uniformed youth had deposited several ruddy oranges on the seat.

"He didn't wait for the money," remarked the tourist, gazing from the fruit to the rapidly retreating train boy.

"He never does," said the fellow passenger, with a knowing smile.

"Oh, I see! It is one of the advantages of your great railroad system. Free fruit for its patrons."

The British tourist was just peeling the second orange when a dainty package of chocolate confectionery was deposited on his knee.

"By Jove," he exclaimed enthusiastically, "this is delightful! When I return home, I shall write a paper on the excellence of American travel."

In less than ten minutes he was the recipient of another package. It was a little box containing a black cigar and two matches.

"No wonder you Americans like to travel," he said, biting the bitter end of the cigar. Then he found that a comic publication had found its way to his seat.

"This is great!" he grinned. "I am going to tip the boy. Wait a moment!"

The train boy halted, and the tourist held out a dime.

"What is that for?" asked the boy.

"For yourself."

"You owe me a half, mister."

"Owe? I thought you were giving these things away?"

"Not today. The half, please."

"But why don't you take the money when you leave the stuff?"

"Because we'd never sell it."

The tourist reluctantly handed over the coin.

"Going to write about the excellence of American travel?" asked the fellow passenger.

"Not I," responded the British tourist. "I am going home and tell the nation about the train robberies over here!"—Exchange.

Vitality of Hebrews.

If the future population of the earth is to be estimated on the basis of race vitality, then there is no question but that the Hebrews will yet be in the majority. Statistics show that the average longevity of the Hebrew race is greater than that of any other. Their numbers must therefore be increasing relatively to every race, and they certainly are. Whether it is due to the sanitary measures enjoined by their religion or because of native vitality is for students of sociology to decide, but the fact still remains. Yet numbers are not always to control the destiny of the race, and it is to be supposed that fraternity and good sense are slowly wiping out race distinctions.—Boston Globe.

A Humble Apology.

"We feel that an apology is due," explains the editor of the Spiketown Blizard, "to the estimable young woman who teaches at the schoolhouse in District No. 5. Through the wretched blunder of a worthless tramp printer, whom we trusted with the setting up of an item just as we were closing the forms for our last week's edition we were made to say that 'Miss Ruby McConnell, the handsome and popular teacher in Riggs neighborhood, is the proud possessor of an elegant new black board.' We wrote it 'black-board.'"—Chicago Tribune.

The Captain of an Ocean Liner.

Nowadays the captain is the host of the ship. He is no longer the gruff, rough seadog in a pea jacket of years gone by. He must observe some of the social amenities; he must talk to the passengers now and then when the weather is fine; he must take his seat at table when he may; he must be a kind of diplomat also and possess wit and tact and a patience sublime; he must see that no jealousies develop among the passengers. I have been told of the very obliging captain who, to please the lady who asked to be shown the equator while the ship was in southern seas, pasted a hair across the large end of a spyglass and told the lady to look. And the lady through the glass declared she could see the equator "as plainly as A B C." One other polite captain I have heard of—one who directed an officer on the bridge to "do as the lady wishes," when the lady requested that the captain steer the ship over to the horizon so she could see what the horizon was like.—Captain Jameson in Collier's.

A Korean Prison.

The gate was wide open, and the courtyard was full of prisoners, and the surrounding buildings were old and tottering. I asked the chief, whom one of the two or three listless attendants called for us, why the prisoners did not run away. "Oh," he replied, "they would be caught and beaten again and kept longer. Now they will get out soon."

But as I looked at them I saw they did not run because they could not. The life was beaten out of them. The keepers brought the heavy red cord with a brass hook at the end and trussed up a man with it to show how the beating was done and then brought us the stiff rods with which victims were pounded over the shins and thighs until the beaten spots were simply masses of festering rotteness. There was a room, black, foul, leprous, in which the men were fastened in the stocks. The Black Hole of Calcutta was scarcely less merciful than this.—Ladies' Monthly.

The Twentieth Century.

The advent of the new century is to be commemorated by the Newton Graphic in the publication of a handsomely bound volume, entitled, "Newton, The Garden City of the Commonwealth, 1874-1901." It will contain valuable and interesting historical material, fully illustrated with half-tone engravings of churches, schools, residences, street views, parks, etc. The history will tell of leading events, characters and progress of the city, and the many advantages of Newton as a beautiful and desirable place of residence will be fully shown. The volume will also contain the portraits and biographies of representative men who, in their lives, their work or their influence have made Newton of to-day the garden city of the Commonwealth and of New England.

It is believed that such a work will commend itself to the citizens of Newton as bringing together a carefully collated record of the lives of men who have contributed to the welfare of our city; men of whom we are justly proud as educators, lawyers, physicians, clergymen and men of affairs.

Such a publication at this time will give to the present, an up to date account of the city and will bequeath to the future a legacy of what Newton was at the beginning of what promises to be a most remarkable century.

The Latest "House of Hits" Publications.

Everyone has heard or seen the delightful play, with its scenes of rural life, entitled, "Lovers Lane."

It is on the beautiful story of this play that Max S. Witt and Robt. F. Roden's latest ballad, "It's A Long Lane That Has No Turning" is founded.

Otto Langley, the composer of the celebrated "Maudslayi" Mexican serenade, has just written a beautiful new serenade called "Verona." Every music lover should have it.

All those music lovers to whom the beautiful ballad "In The House Of Too Much Trouble" appeared strongly, will be delighted with "A Little Empty Nest," the latest by the same authors.

"Don't Butt In" is the odd title of a new song, which is a bit hit with Lew Dockstader, the famous minstrel, this season. It is by Johnson, Cole & Johnson, the writers of May Irwin's hits last season.

The new book, "The Puppet Crown," is the latest craze this year, and Mary Dowling Sutton's waltz of the same title will be one of the big hits.

George Primrose, the popular minstrel, is singing a new song, "When The Jack O'Lantern Starts To Walk About" in his show. It is a splendid success for him.

The above publications are issued this month by Jos. W. Stern & Co., the "House of Hits" who are also agents for the celebrated Hawkes Sonorous Band Instruments and the Beare "Majestic" Stringed Instruments. They will be pleased to send their illustrated catalogue free, upon application to their main office, 34 E. 21st Street, New York.

Whist.

The following hand is an excellent illustration of the advantages of the Massachusetts system of indicating trump strength.

Our readers will recall the fact that we have published the system in full in this column, but it is well worth repeating.

The conventional call for trumps is the play of an unnecessarily high card in a plain suit before a lower. Such as a five spade before a two or a king before a queen. This requires two rounds for completion. Four trumps in the hand, without calling are shown by first playing a card of medium value, followed by a higher and then by a lower card. Such as five, six and two. This convention requires three rounds to complete.

The Massachusetts system seeks to give earlier information by reversing the conventional call, and shows four or more trumps by playing small cards up in plain suits. Three trumps or less being indicated by playing the small cards down. The repetition of the four trumps showing in a second plain suit is an absolute call. In nine times out of ten the trump strength is usually indicated by the play to the first trick.

Spade 10 turned by West, North to lead.

The underlined card wins the trick.

North and South 11.

Notes.

Trick 1. North is almost certain that South is showing four trumps, but as the trey is missing, he shifts to his strong club suit for the double purpose of finding out South's wishes, as well as indicating his card of re-entry.

Trick 2. The fall here is absolute. South is either calling or is out of clubs.

Trick 3. With two strong suits, and trumps strength shown by partner, North is justified in leading trumps. South, with every expectation of losing, finesse the jack. East can save one trick here by playing one of his equal honors.

Tricks 4-5-6. With clubs and diamonds marked with partner, and with strong cards in hearts, South proceeds to draw trumps from his opponents.

Tricks 8-13. East loses another trick here by attempting to underplay South with a small heart. South takes no chances, and after clearing the diamond suit for partner by playing the ace, puts North in with the club and they take 11 tricks.

At other tables 6 tricks was the maximum taken by the North and South players, including some of the best whists in New England.

Two of these tricks were made possible by East's playing at tricks 3 and 8, but the remaining three are due to the Massachusetts system, which gave sufficient information to justify the trump lead by North.

A COUNTRY ROAD.

A dusty, stony way, whose hard'ring and is thick with blackberries and goldenrod; Abrupt, bare hills on one side looking down, And from the other you can see the town Follow the river's course through meadows green, Over which thick woods and marble ledges lean.

A little farther, where the road descends, A brook's soft lullaby with some bird song blends, (Gone from its edge the dear old dame's small cot Half hidden by quaint flowers); lush bergamot Makes sweet its banks, its depths the boys still swim Or watch the minnows from some willow limb.

Upon its bridge how often I have stood, Watching the west, whose glory seemed to flood With tenderest light the porch and the graves Beside it—turn to gold the brooklet's waves—Till from the hill, oh, dearest sight of all, I saw my father, and I heard him call!

He came with sturdy stride and swinging pall— My hand in his—told my day's whole tale Of joys, that "heath his bright smile seemed to grow, While I listened was my every wish was to grow, As his sweet words fell on my soul like balm While we walked homeward through the fragrant calm.

—Mary M. McCarthy in Boston Transcript.

SALTED BUTTER.

Why It Keeps Better Than Butter That Is Fresh.

Why does salt butter keep better than fresh butter? We must first realize that the bacterial population of a moderate sized pat of butter may be reckoned by millions, that a tiny lump only large enough to go into a tumbler has been known to be tenanted by nearly 48,000,000, that, in fact, in consuming a slice of bread and butter you may unconsciously be assimilating individual lives exceeding in number those of the whole of Europe. Thus the urgency for keeping these hordes in check and hence the efforts which are made, first, to set up effectual barriers to their ingress by taking proper precautions in the production of milk and, second, in the conduct of the processes involved in the manufacture and distribution of the finished article.

Included in these processes is the addition of salt in such quantities as to justify the butter being known as salt butter, this addition being made with the object of extending the keeping powers of the butter or, in other words, to suppress to a large extent the activities of the butter bacteria. That salt does act in this manner is shown by the fact that in butter thus treated a very large reduction in the number of micro-organisms present is effected. There can be little doubt, therefore, that the common butter microbes do not by any means regard salt as their elixir of life.

In England boracic acid is said to be extensively used in butter as a preservative or antiseptic agent, while in the United States a recent public health document states that none was reported to have been found in the samples of butter examined. This is probably due to the fact that in America there exists a strong prejudice in favor of salt butter, whereas in England the use of salt butter is the exception and not the rule. Hence in America salt can be used as a preservative instead of the boracic acid employed for that purpose in England.

The densely populated condition of butter above referred to is not to be wondered at if we realize that the raw material in the shape of milk may contain from 500,000 to as many as 100,000,000 of bacteria in a few drops.—Longman's Magazine.

Where Yankees Beat 'Em.

He is from England, and not long from there. He was visiting his friends in Hyde Park and, of course, he was boasting.

"Oh, yes, me boy, the United States does very well for a new nation," he said loudly. "You are great in some respects, but look at us. We have our navy, that beats the world; our army, never licked; our great steamship lines, our bank, Lombard street, the financial center of the world; our loyal colonies, and all the rest. What can equal them?"

"And we have age too. Look at our abbey and our ancient towns and our papers of state. Why, man, in what can you boast of beating us?"

His Hyde Park friend studied a moment. Then he replied:

"Down in Texas there is an old chap who was talked to just this way once by a man from your country who went there for his health. And after all the Englishman's boasting was done the man of the cattle country winked at me, rolled his tobacco over in his mouth and spit 14 feet into the eye of a pig standing that far away."

"Klun my bloody Englishman on earth do that?" says he. And I ask you, can he?"

The Englishman suggested brandy and soda in disgust.—Kansas City Journal.

Advice From the Box.

On one occasion in the fifties an amateur dramatic performance was given in San Francisco for the benefit of some deserving charity. Among the performers was the late Hugh Farrar McDermott, the poet, and in a box was Mr. Mills. The play was some classic piece, and the acting was so bad that what should have been a tragedy became a farce. In the last act McDermott dropped his sword and, stooping awkwardly, picked it up. There was a titter in the audience, which increased as the luckless performer asked, "What shall I do with this envenomed blade?"

From the banker's box came in a queer stage whisper, "Stab yourself, Hugh, and be done with it!"—Frank Leslie's Monthly.

Misadventure is misery. It is the mind of satan, the great enemy, an outcast from all joy and the opponent of all goodness and happiness.—J. Hamilton.

It don't matter if the world is round or dat, you'll roll off it if you don't keep your balance.—Atlanta Constitution.

Principal Bragdon of Lasell Sued.
In the Middlesex County Court at East Cambridge last week Thursday, papers were filed by Edwin C. Schell of Chicago bringing suit to the amount of $5000 against Charles C.
Bragdon, principal of Lasell Seminary at Auburndale. The plaintiff claims that in August, 1899, the defendant caused a libelous article to be published in Zion's Herald, which is one of the important Methodist organs in the country. Two similar suits were filed some time ago by Mr.
Schell in the Suffolk Superior Court against the Boston Wesleyan Association and Dr. Parkhurst, editor of Zion's Herald. It is understood that Mr. Schell also sued the Epworth Herald, of which Dr. Barry is the editor. In all cases the charges are for alleged libel.

The membership, which includes a number of well-known professional and business men, will be limited to 25.

The entire city is in mourning for the dead President, and the decorations are many and tasteful. In Newton, there is hardly a store window which does not bear some testimonial of regret, most of them containing a picture of the President draped in black, white and purple.

Especially mention should be made of the beautiful window of Wilbur Bros. the elaborate decorations of the Corner Market, and the neat effects produced by Hubbard, Hudson, Haase, Barber Bros. Brackett's Market, Otis Bros. and Lane's. Brackett's block was heavily draped in black and Elliot and Murray's blocks were also decorated. The clerks and carriers had a fine window at the Post office.

At Newtonville, the windows of H. W. Bates, A. Sidney Bryant, Dennis, Thompson, Pierce Co. and a few others were well worth visiting.

West Newton was rather lax, and with the exception of City Hall and the Police building but little was done. Colligan and Toombs and Tarlton's store made the best display.

At Auburndale, but little attempt was made to decorate and the same was true of Newton Highlands and Newton Centre, a few public spirited merchants in each village doing something to show the universal regret for the President.

Thursday was wholly devoted to the memorial services, all the stores being closed and business being generally suspended. The electric cars on all the Newton lines stopped running for ten minutes between 3.30 and 3.40 o'clock, the railway men remaining uncovered during that time. The golf clubs also observed the true spirit of the day by closing their links.

Memorial services were held in all the villages and full accounts will be found below.

ELIOT CHURCH

A large audience, completely filling the auditorium of the Eliot church gathered at 11 o'clock. The rostrum was simply but effectively decorated with the national colors and black.

The program was as follows: Organ prelude, Funeral march. Invocation, Rev. F. B. Matthews. Anthem, "Still, still with Thee." Reading of the Scriptures, Rev. G. R. Grose. Hymn, "Our God, our help in ages past." Pastoral prayer, Rev. Dr. Shinn. Quartette, "Lead kindly light." Reading of the President's proclamation, President Henry Bailey. Address, Rev. Adelbert L. Hudson. Quartette, "Rock of Ages." Address, Hon. Samuel L. Powers. Hymn, "Nearer My God to Thee." Address, Rev. Dr. William H. Davis. Hymn, "God bless our native land." Benediction, Rev. Mr. Grose. Organ postlude.

Rev. Mr. Hudson spoke of our late President as a type of Christian manhood. He dwelt upon the manliness of McKinley's character. Gentle and kindly, he was always the gentleness of a strong nature and this was especially true in his constant recognition of our dependence on a higher power. His dying words "His will be done" was typical of his life. It was not the false humility of a weak and yielding nature which submits to circumstances through a negative feeling of helplessness; it was the power of positive Christian faith bringing all the forces of a strong will into harmony with the eternal purpose. His life is a striking lesson to the youth of our land to teach them that Christianity is a noble and a manly thing. At the same time his sublime faith should teach us all that perplexing problems of our time must be solved in harmony with the Divine will.

Congressman Powers spoke substantially as follows:

This is not the time for the occasion to place any just estimate upon the value and far reaching effect of the great life that had just closed. It will be the duty of the historian of the future to determine the true indebtedness of this nation and humanity to this life of patient, patriotic self sacrifice. Mr. Powers briefly sketched the life of the President calling attention to his high and noble patriotism, a calm resolute courage and a conscientious discharge of duty.

He entered a Congress composed of men of exceptional ability such as Chief Justice Field, General Banks, General Butler, ex-Govs. Robinson and Claflin, Garfield, Reed, Frye and Hale, and while he was not a great natural leader of men as we regard Clay, Douglass and Blaine, he won his position by the gentle qualities of a loving nature. He absolutely evaded personalities in debate; he spoke ill of none; he discussed principles not men and his views were optimistic in the extreme.

He devoted himself to the study of economical questions and entered the shop, the laborer's house and the miner's hut in search of information. He knew that business prosperity meant happiness and business depression meant unhappiness.

He believed thoroughly in the patriotism of the American people and ordered every sentinel removed from the White House grounds during his first term. But "Virtue forms no shield to ward off the arrows of death."

He fell before his great life work was fully completed. His noble life will teach this generation and the generations to come the importance and value of a life devoted unselfishly to the public weal.

On Tuesday I saw the funeral train as it moved from the White House to the Capitol. On every side were gathered the thousands and tens of thousands to pay the last tribute to the great dead. White and black mingled and masted together and stood with uncovered heads beneath the pouring rain, as in reverent submission to the hand of God. From almost every corner were wafted out on the misty air the strains of that old song so dear to him, "Nearer My God to Thee," and we are told that as the funeral train bearing all that remains that is mortal of William McKinley approached the Alleghenies, that little children came from their mountain homes and scattered flowers along the railroad tracks over which the funeral car was to pass and waited and watched its coming at midnight, that the old miners came out of the mines and lined the tracks and waited his coming as that of an old friend; that when the funeral train passed they stood in the darkness with their caps in hands upon which glistered the little mining lamps bowed in reverent grief. He was their friend as he was the friend of every true American citizen. His life was given to his country and he who serves country serves humanity, and he who serves humanity serves God.

Rev. Dr. Davis said that these were great days for the Republic, when the character and career of such a man as President McKinley are lifted upon the prayers of a great people and ideals of government are made clear and plain.

The nation comes through a baptism of sorrow to realize the sacredness of official life and service. This should be a day of gratitude and not of gloom. Thanksgiving that such a man has wrought his work and crowned it with a Christian death. The lesson for us is to honor the dead by a more splendid living on the part of every one in the Republic.

We should stand under President Roosevelt with our shoulders and hearts. We should no longer allow conspirators against the Republic to organize and peddle out their venom. Detraction should have no place in politics and the sense of the sacredness and dignity of official life should come home to all the people.

At the close of the service the entire congregation stood while the G. A. R. the guests of the church, filed slowly out of the edifice.

NEWTONVILLE.

Union services were held in the Methodist church at 10.45 a. m., in which Revs. W. J. Thompson, S. G. Dunham, R. T. Loring, O. S. Davis and John Goddard participated. Solos were sung by Miss Cora Carter and Mr. W. B. Hill and the church was crowded to the doors.

The address was given by the Rev. John Goddard of the New Church, who said in part:

A great crime has been committed. Call it by its true name—murder. Murder as much more foul than common murder as the office of President is more exalted and influential than the work of the citizen. It is a violation of the laws of God, whose stern exterior is but the outward husk and protection within which the beauties of heaven grow. The law of Sinai must not be destroyed but fulfilled. The anarchist can destroy but not fulfil.

Mr. Goddard made a brief mention of the President's career, to his death bed at Buffalo, and in reference to his last words, said, "We can gain a glimpse of how it may be God's way, when we reflect that a nation is only a larger individual, and as sorrow is often good for the individual, so it may be good for the nation."

Mr. Goddard deplored the caricaturing of public men by tongue, or pen or pencil, which lowered the standard of respect for government, and which should be rendered unprofitable by a sound public opinion.

WEST NEWTON.

The union memorial services in the Second Congregational church at five o'clock attracted an audience which filled the entire edifice.

The program bore a fine likeness of President McKinley, and consisted of the President's favorite hymns, and addresses by the Revs. Alfred Adams, E. F. Snell and Dr. T. P. Prudden. Rev. J. C. Javies was prevented by illness from taking part in the service.

Rev. Mr. Adams said in part that no eulogy can express the sadness of a great nation for the appreciation, esteem and love in which the President is held. The colored people have no distinctively racial tribute to pay at this time, as they did when Lincoln was assassinated, but they recognize the value of liberty and humbly appreciate the great loss of the nation. He believed that such a life possessed so much rare grandeur as would teach successive generations to comprehend. Rev. Mr. Snell said that this event is a personal sorrow and that tears have not been far away from many of us these last few days. "Lincoln, Garfield and McKinley, what a triumvirate of men—What a nation that such men should die for it." He referred to his home life as an object lesson, teaching as no church could do that marriage was a sacrament. His religious life showed that religion was not a refuge for weak minds, but a distinctive quality of the highest American manhood. His political life showed that it was possible for a gentleman to be a politician, and the future of American politics is more hopeful for his part in it.

Rev. Dr. Prudden said that this was a dreadful—a shameful event. Doubly shameful if it was not taken to heart. He gave a broader meaning to the world anarchy, saying it included the illegal measures used in strikes, the political corruption in great cities, the business principle of succeed, right or wrong. He believed that lynchers stabbed the government and that the assassin at Buffalo only did in an extreme way, what was being done all over the land.

He deplored the notoriety given the assassin, and believed the 14,000 or more murders or attempts at murder in one year, to be a degrading blot on our civilization.

NEWTON CENTRE.

The Methodist church was completely filled at the union services held yesterday morning. Rev. G. H. Spencer presided and addresses were made by Rev. E. M. Noyes of the First Church and Rev. Dr. E. D. Burr of the Baptist church.

Dr. Burr said in part, speaking of the personal nature of the President, that there is in Germany an aristocracy of learning, in England an aristocracy of birth, in America, here and there, a fictitious aristocracy of wealth, but the aristocracy to which Wm. McKinley belonged was an aristocracy of genuine worth. Learning is an acquisition, birth an accident, wealth an accessory, but character is an essential. His character made him a potent moral force, and was his irresistible weapon of defense.

Dr. Burr likened this character to a cathedral with a long nave of definite purpose, where motive and impulse were brought into obedience to a well guarded will. Upon the right transept in which love was perfected. Upon the left the transept of lofty thought, and back of all, illumining all, the chancel where conscience was sensitized by communion with God.

Rev. Mr. Noyes spoke of the public services of Wm. McKinley, first as a patriot in the field and in the halls of state, and again as a parliamentary leader. His unflinching courtesy, tact and sincerity made him a leader of men.

As an executive, Mr. Noyes called attention to the distinction between a politician and a statesman, claiming that McKinley was an accomplished politician, possessing the most statesmanlike qualities. As a statesman he possessed vision and planned for the unenviable with a foresight and skill that we now recognize and honor. He possessed breadth, and a weeping nation today bears witness to our national unity. He also possessed capacity for growth and he had the gift of patience. Mr. Noyes eloquently pictured the contrast before and after the assassination, and said "With the calm of the soldier, the dignity of the statesman, and the triumphant faith of the Christian, Wm. McKinley met the last enemy."

CHESTNUT HILL.

At the Church of the Redeemer, Rev. Dr. Henry S. Nash preached "Alms 40-10, 'Be still and know that I am God.' The order of service was that set forth by Bishop Lawrence, opening with the words, "I am the resurrection and the life." The hymns were those dear to all Christian hearts. One of Bishop W. W. Howe, 1807, "For all the saints who from their labors rest," then "Rock of Ages," Toplady 1776 in place of an anthem, "Nearer my God to Thee," Sarah F. Adams, 1861, known probably and sung more widely than any hymn of our time, closing with the hymn written by Dr. Isaac Watts in 1719, "O God, our help in ages past."

BOARD OF ALDERMEN.

Adopt Suitable Resolutions on the Death of President McKinley.

Eloquent Speeches Made by Aldermen Weeks, Mellen, Weed and President Baily.

The regular meeting of the board of aldermen was held last Monday evening at the usual hour. President Baily in the chair and Aldermen Brown, Chesley, Ensign, Fisher, Hubbard, Lothrop, Lowe, Lyman, Mellen, Norris, Pond, Pulsifer, Stickney, Saltonstall, Trowbridge, Wardwell, Weed, Weeks and Weldon being present.

The following communication was received from His Honor, the Mayor: Gentlemen of the Board of Aldermen—

One week ago, under the shadow of a great national calamity, you took appropriate action expressing your abhorrence of the assassin's deed, and the fervent hope that our President's life might be spared to us. Tonight the shadow has deepened to the darkness of death, and he so recently the choice of the people to execute their will, has passed into the sleep of death, and his name and fame will stand linked for all time with the firmer foundations of the Republic and its history.

We can best express our appreciation of his great life by pledging ourselves with renewed devotion to the problems of our day with the same sublime faith in God, and purpose to deal righteously in all things, which made him the trusted guide of the nation.

The flags on all public buildings are at half mast and will so remain till the last burial rites are performed.

In compliance with the proclamation of President Roosevelt and His Excellency, the Governor, that Thursday next, the day of the funeral, be observed in our churches, I recommend the passage of any order you may deem necessary for the suspension of all public occupations, and that the school committee be requested to close the schools.

No suggestion of mine is needed for such further action as you may deem proper.

Edward L. Pickard, Mayor.

Upon motion of Aldermen Weeks the communication was referred to a select committee of three and a recess of fifteen minutes taken to allow the committee to act. Aldermen Weeks, Mellen and Weed were appointed on the committee.

Upon reassembling, Aldermen Weeks from the select committee presented the following resolutions:

Resolved, By the Board of Aldermen in the name of the City of Newton and in behalf of its citizens.

First, that this board hereby places on record its appreciation of the exalted character and public services of our late President William McKinley. Through a long and illustrious career as soldier, legislator, governor and president, he has been distinguished for purity of life, fearlessness in action, steadfastness of purpose, unwavering devotion to the public interests entrusted to him, and wisdom and eloquence in his public utterances. By his tact and thoughtfulness of others, he won the love of many and the respect of all. As president, by the influence of his personality he inaugurated a period of unexampled prosperity for the nation. By the prudence of his statesmanship, he obtained an honorable peace after a righteous and successful war, and so dealt with the novel and perplexing problems resulting from that war, as to excite the loyal confidence of his fellow citizens and the respect of the great powers. His untimely death is a great national calamity. His memory will ever be a glorious national heritage.

Second, that to the widow and immediate family of the deceased President is hereby extended our heartfelt sympathy in the overwhelming personal sorrow and loss which they have been called upon to bear.

Third, that loyal and unwavering allegiance is hereby pledged to him who in this great national crisis has been called to succeed to the Presidency of the Nation, and to those principles of law, order and constitutional liberty, consecrated anew by the blood of our martyr President.

Aldermen Weeks then said: Mr. President—It is proper that the Newton City Government, as well as all organized bodies should halt in its proceedings and in response to a unanimous sentiment on the part of the people which it represents pay tribute to our late President. When this board last met in regular session we came buoyed up by the hope and belief that the President was on the road to recovery, which hope was rudely shattered by Friday's news, and when in the middle of the night the tolling of the bells announced that our worst fears had been realized I doubt not there was a sense of personal loss to every one of us. From his early youth when he commenced four years of active and highly honorable service to help save the Union, to his death when he had but recently completed his first term in the Presidency, William McKinley had been an example of patriotism, personal uprightness and effective effort. During these years he had a mind always open to conviction and an almost unparalleled power to impress his convictions on the minds and hearts of the people he represented. His death has brought mourning to all. Christendom and I believe in no similar case has this mourning been so little official and so largely from the heart, but Mr. President, much as we mourn in there is not a valuable lesson to be learned from our misfortune? We have established our own methods of choosing our chief magistrate approved by all of our people and when this is done the elected should carry in his person the very symbol of government. A blow at him should thus be a blow against all good citizens. We as a people are more than lax about this matter. We indulge in partisan malice, encourage class hatred and decry the personal character of our Chief Magistrate. Even if we do not do these things ourselves we witness them every day without protest. A well known paper repeatedly cartoons the President as striving for regal power, as an enemy of the people and when the world is shocked by his untimely taking away cries in maudlin evidences of sorrow that he was a just, pure, upright man and that no President since the days of Washington has been so near the hearts of the people. Are we not in an unenviable position as a people when we calmly assent to the proposition that all candidates for the presidency are unclean, designing men, that our choice ruler is a despot or is striving to be one and that only his death by an assassin's blow can accord recognition of the fact that he is our president, and as such requires the protection of all good citizens. Is this not a suitable time for all to join in an effort to change such a condition, to labor to build up a public sentiment so vigorously opposed to such views that they cannot live, by so doing. We will give our Chief Magistrate greater personal security than can an armed guard, and a citizenship of such character that it will be of immeasurable value to the government in every way. If the death of the President can teach us that free speech is not license to defame and that a free press does not give the privilege to libel and slander, both being the means of inciting the ignorant and vicious to violence, then great as have been Mr. McKinley's services to mankind during his life his death will serve an equally great purpose.

Aldermen Mellen said in part that it was not the time for a setology on the death of our President. "Yet, it is not as a President that we alone regard McKinley. He was all that is good in domestic life. I think there is nothing more pathetic than his devotion to his invalid wife, and this it is that endears him to the hearts of the women of this country. When the jewels of America are chosen there will be three that will stand out—First Washington, who by his bravery and sagacity gave us a country. Then Lincoln, who struck from the limbs of four millions of human beings the shackles which made them free men, and saved the country. Third, William McKinley, who found us obscure and provincial and raised us up to be a world's power, admired and feared by all nations of the earth."

Alderman Weed said in part:—It seems to me that it is not as a President and ruler that we think of him most at this time, but as a man. There is not one of us who does not feel that he has met with a great personal sorrow, and I think the real reason of it is easily found. No man who is capable of taking his life in his own hands, no man who is capable of such attention to his invalid wife, no man who when he was struck down by the assassin was willing to forgive the murderer, no man who was willing to shield the murderer from violence can but hold the admiration and love of every man who loves true manhood and nobility of character. His achievements will find a place in history. His personality will stand forth in our national history.

Alderman Ensign recalled the assassination of President Lincoln, when he was a member of the government in Conn. He urged that our officials be treated with more dignity and respect than at present. He believed in the American people, and said in closing.

"Our experiments have been costly. They have cost us life and money, but I believe that the republic is bound to exist as long as human government stands, and when we have such words as Lincoln's to live on, 'that this government is of the people, by the people and for the people,' and when we have the speech of our late President, that with the flag of our country in our hands there is no danger to the American people."

President Baily then said in part: "The pathos of this terrible tragedy is indescribable, whether we view it from the public or the domestic side. President McKinley constituted all that was best in American citizenship, and his death comes to the hearts of the American people as a personal loss. It should be a satisfaction to us to know that this act was not the act of a man belonging to any of the races whom we have fostered in this free and splendid country, but it was the act of a man whose hereditary blood was tainted with the taint of evil."

Alderman Baily closed his speech with a tribute to President Roosevelt. The resolutions were then unanimously adopted by a rising vote.

At the hearing at 8.45 p. m., on the petition of the Telephone Co. to construct conduits in Washington street from Greenough street to the Charles river at the Lower Falls, Mr. H. S. Allen appeared for the company and said that this location is to be part of a through line of conduits from Boston to So. Framingham. The company wishes to undertake this work this fall. Mr. Allen further said that the trench would be 18 inches wide and 2 feet deep, and the work would be done to the satisfaction of the city.

A Certain Cure for Dysentery and Diarrhoea.

"Some years ago I was one of a party that intended making a long bicycle trip," says F. L. Taylor, of New Albany, Bradford County, Pa. "I was taken suddenly with diarrhoea, and was about to give up the trip, when editor Ward, of the Laceyville Messenger, suggested that I take a dose of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. I purchased a bottle and took two doses, one before starting and one on the route. I made the trip successfully and never felt any ill effect. Again last summer I was almost completely run down with an attack of dysentery. I bought a bottle of this same remedy and this time one dose cured me." Sold by all druggists.

DEAD BODY IN THE WOODS.

SHOCKING DISCOVERY MADE BY BOYS AT OAK HILL—CORPSE HAD BEEN THERE TWO MONTHS AND WAS EVIDENTLY A SUICIDE.

The decomposed body of a man, apparently between 40 and 50 years old, was found late last Saturday afternoon in a remote woodland section off Nahanton street, Oak Hill district. The discovery was made by an inmate of the Working Boys' Home on Winchester street.

In the right temple was a bullet hole, and lying at the side of the body was a 38-caliber revolver. With this, the police believe, the man committed suicide. The revolver contained a cartridge shell.

The identity of the man is a mystery which the police are trying to solve. It was evident to them that the body had been there fully two months. The clothes were of blue serge. A black derby, marked on the inside of the hat band, "I. B. Goat," and "Dag," it is thought, furnished but scant clue. Chief Tarbox and Patrolman Martin Neagle took charge of the body until it was viewed by Assistant Medical Examiner Utley and later turned over to an undertaker at Newton Centre.

On Sunday there were several who called to look at the remains in the receiving tomb of the Newton cemetery but none were able to identify it. Monday the body was buried.

A Night of Terror.

"Awful anxiety was felt for the widow of the brave General Burnham of Machias, Me., when the doctors said she would die from pneumonia before morning," writes Mrs. S. H. Lincoln, who attended her that fearful night, but she begged for Dr. King's New Discovery, which had more than once saved her life, and cured her of Consumption. After taking, she slept all night. Further use entirely cured her." This marvelous medicine is guaranteed to cure all Throat, Chest and Lung Diseases. Only 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free at Arthur Hudson's drug store.

IN MEMORIAM.

When the solemn tolling of the bells in the stillness which precedes the dawn informed the city and country last Saturday morning that the President was dead, it spoke more eloquently than words of the grief with which its message was received.

The past week has been memorable in the history of these United States, and bears strong testimony to the devoted patriotism of its people.

They have withstood the shock of the assassination with renewed purpose to uphold the principles of law and order. They have mourned the death of a great and good man with that sincerity and whole heartedness which signifies that true manhood must command universal love and respect. They await the future with a sublime confidence in the principles of the Republic and the knowledge that God reigns and the government at Washington still lives.

Accepting as truth the words of the venerable Senator Hoar that "the coward blow has strengthened the hands of the nation" the American people mourn for the past, have confidence in the present and look into the future with a faith, hope and courage which is founded on those principles our well beloved President so well illustrated in his daily life.

The golden anniversary of the Channing church is a noteworthy event, fittingly observed. The best wishes of the whole community are extended to the society for many years of honor and usefulness.

Especially appropriate at this time is the publication of President McKinley's last speech at Buffalo. It will be found in another column.

The pressure of memorial news this week has caused us to "blue pencil" the usual number of local items.

Captain Weeks' candidacy for mayor is meeting with great favor.

HALF-CENTURY ENDED.

Epoch in Channing Church's History Marked With Special Services, Sunday.

The Channing Unitarian church held services last Sunday morning in commemoration of the fiftieth anniversary of the organization of that parish. More than 800 attended the exercises. Manifest grief over the death of the late President McKinley somewhat overshadowed the jubilation of the occasion. Beginning with the singing of an anthem by the church quartet, the program included responsive reading of psalms, invocation by Rev. E. J. Young; hymn, "From Generation to Generation," address by Rev. Dr. Young, anniversary hymn the words of which were written by Mrs. Samuel L. Powers, an address by Rev. Francis B. Hornbrooke D.D., an anthem sung by the choir, an address by the recently chosen pastor, Rev. Adelbert L. Hudson, solo "Fear not ye, O Israel," by George H. Remple and the hymn "The Church Universal." Rev. Dr. Edward James Young was pastor of Channing church from 1857 until 1869. In his address he reviewed the life of the church at its establishment in this city 50 years ago, its growth and prosperity. He told of the conditions under which the founders of it had labored; what they had to contend with and of their character motifs.

Dr. Young spoke feelingly of the similarity of the feeling that existed in Newton at the time of President Lincoln's death and which now fills the hearts of its citizens.

Rev. Dr. Francis Bickford Hornbrooke, from 1879 to 1900 pastor of the church, described the work of the church's leaders during his time. He told how the handsome edifice now occupied by the society was subscribed for and built, and emphasized the influence of the parish in the community.

After the singing of "Nearer my God to Thee," Rev. Adelbert L. Hudson, the new minister of the church, spoke upon "The Forward Look." He said that the chief value of an anniversary occasion lies in its power to lift us above the levels of our daily tasks onto the heights whence looking backward over the past we can better comprehend its tendencies and looking forward to the future can better interpret its needs,—in short can see life in somewhat clearer perspective, and with broader view. Standing on this height we realize that what we call the present time is merely an imaginary line separating an irrevocable past from an unknown future, and all that we can really possess at any point of time is the impulse of the passing moment. It is of vital importance to direct this impulse wisely and conceive its power—doubly vital in view of the fact that we stand facing the dangers, problems and duties of a new century, in which society feels as never before the necessity of perfect union between liberty and law. We are learning that the ideal democracy is not an outward form of government, but an inward principle of life. To realize it requires that moral preparedness which implies in the largest sense the religious motive. In this moment of hushed expectancy, when the civilized world is watching with eager interest the tremendous strain upon the policy of free speech and self-government, we stand with bowed heads acknowledging our dependence on a Higher Power. It is because "God reigns" that enlightened government "Still lives." Faith in the Eternal Goodness is the great steady power or balance wheel which alone can govern the complex machinery of our modern life. "I regard it," concluded Mr. Hudson, "as profoundly significant that this church enters its second half century of growth and usefulness at a time when the need of vital and rational religion is so deeply felt. I dare not doubt that the opportunity and the need will commend the united and consecrated service of our noblest powers."

The following letter from the Eliot church was read:

To the Channing Church:—The Eliot church extend their hearty greeting and good will to their friends in the Channing church upon their jubilee anniversary in their history as a Church of God. May the blessing of our common Father abide richly with you and with your pastor, newly come among us, in the years to be as in those gone by.

Wishing you grace and mercy and peace we are yours in the bonds of all Christian work.

Wm. H. Davis, Minister.

Cordial letters from the pastors of the Grace and Methodist churches were also received by the committee. The list of ministers of the Channing church includes the names of Rev. Joseph C. Smith, 1853-57, E. J. Young, 1857-69; Eli Fav, 1870-73; Geo. W. Hosmer, 1873-79; F. B. Hornbrooke, 1879-1900.

The original members of the church were Lucretia W. Allen, Calvin Bailey, Catherine Bailey, Susan J. Bailey, Henry Bigelow, Matilda A. Bigelow, Gilman Brackett, F. W. Capen, Catherine H. Coffin, Andrew Cole, Elizabeth Cole, Abraham Hews, Darwin E. Jewett, Caroline W. Jewett, Hartley Lord, Sarah E. Lord, Marion R. Lord, Anna C. Mower, Harriet Nickerson, Olivia M. Norris, Lois Pierce, Samuel G. Simpkins, Joseph C. Smith, Margaret A. Smith, Sarah C. Thomas, Jane R. Thompson, Harriet Wiswall.

The program was a neat specimen of the printer's art, and contained cuts of the old and new churches, of the various ministers, and of Channing and many items of interesting information regarding the church.

Mr. Editor—Allow me to speak a few words in favor of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I suffered for three years with the bronchitis and could not sleep at night. Brockman, Baguette, Mo. This remedy is for sale by all druggists.

Four Bears at a Shot.

A number of years ago Mr. Withee was presented with two fine hounds, and, wishing to try their training and their grit, he took them out to do a little bear hunting.

The first morning Withee let the dogs out for a run while he was getting the breakfast, expecting them to be back in a short time. When breakfast was over, the dogs had not returned, so, taking his gun, Mr. Withee started out in the direction they had taken. After traveling about a mile the faint barking of dogs could be heard, and it was then plain why the dogs had not returned. They had scented game and were in pursuit. The sound of the barking led him far up the side of a mountain, and soon he came in sight of the dogs standing around the upturned roots of a tree.

Mr. Withee crept up cautiously until within about 15 feet of a cave that was near by, and then a black, shaggy head could be seen just above the roots. Taking good aim, he fired his .44 caliber and awaited results. After several minutes he went up to the cave, and what he saw there gave him a shock from which he has never recovered. Two bears lay dead, and two more were so stunned that a few quick passes with a knife settled them.

For the four bears Mr. Withee received $20 bounty, $27.50 for their hides and $42 for the bear oil, making $89.50 for one day's hunt.—Maine Woods.

All For Love.

It was a runaway match. The young couple had nothing to live on but love, and they grew thin on it, for the butcher, baker, etc., heartlessly refused to barter any of the necessities of life for a bit of love, and the landlady wouldn't accept even a large slice of it for rent.

At last they were reduced to such extremities that starvation stared them in the face. When starvation does this, it, so to say, "puts you out of countenance."

"Oh, George," wailed the young wife, "what shall we do? I am so hungry!"

"Alas, I know not, darling," he sighed fondly but sadly, toying with her luxuriant tresses.

"But I know, George!" she suddenly exclaimed after a pause. "Sell my hair!"

"What?" he almost shouted, with a horror stricken face. "Sacrifice your lovely golden locks! Ruthlessly cut off the greatest ornament a woman can possess? Never! Never! I will starve first!"

"But, George," she assured him, "it does not require cutting off. See!"

And she detached the glistening 3 guinea switch from her head and laid it in his hand.

That night the young couple supped luxuriously, but still he was not happy.—Pearson's Weekly.

Lighting Up the Coliseum.

The Romans have the hideous habit of periodically lighting the Coliseum during the tourist season with Bengal lights and, what is more amazing still, usually succeed in making a financial success of it, although no one was ever known to go twice.

There is the additional abomination in these days of a big brass band and a chorus of 100 voices in an invocation to the Flavian amphitheater. The effect is tremendous, but somewhat stunning to those who are accustomed to their Coliseum empty and flooded with peaceful moonlight, where pictures from the past rise with the clearness of second sight, and no sound is heard but one's own breathing or the song of the nightingale. Contrast with such a scene the red, blue and yellow Bengal lights, the smoke, the confusion, the hundred shrieking throats and the clang of the brazen instruments! Imagination shrinks and curses the Roman of today with whom such a thing is possible. But is it his fault? As I said before, it is a great financial success, and the Italians certainly do not patronize it. Query, who does?—Rome Letter in Pall Mall Gazette.

How They Broke Up.

An amusing story is related in "Canadian Savage Folk" of the manner in which an adjournment was taken by a mass meeting. A missionary who had started a school among the Indians met with opposition, and the meeting had been called in support of the rival scheme.

There were several speakers who denounced the school in existence. We replied vigorously, showing the efficiency of the school and denouncing in turn the methods adopted by the opposition. An Indian chief produced some specimens of work done at the school, and several speakers supported the work as it was being done. The climax was reached when a gentleman rose and said:

"I move the whole thing bust!" The chairman put the motion. "It is moved and seconded that the whole thing bust!" The audience sprang to their feet and, waving hats, yelled "Busted!" and made for the door. Thus ended the first and last opposition in that matter.

Pride of the Riding Academy.

Rowell—There goes Withers on horseback. He is a living illustration of the saying, "A merciful man is merciful to his beast."

Snaffle—In what way? Rowell—Don't you see? He lets his weight rest on the horse only once in a while. The most of the time he is in the air, going up or coming down.—Boston Transcript.

Some men never amount to much because they get into the habit of frequently beginning life anew.—Chicago News.

The world owes every man a living, but doesn't furnish a collector.—Denver Times.

The Water Beetle.

The great carnivorous water beetle, the dytiscus, after catching and eating other creatures all day, with two minute intervals to come up, poke the tips of its wings out of the water and join some air against its spiracles before descending once more to its sub-aquous hunting grounds, will rise by night from the surface of the Thames, lift again those horny wing cases, unfold a broad and beautiful pair of gauzy wings and whirl off on a visit of love and adventure to some distant pond, on to which it descends like a bullet from the air above.

When people are sitting in a greenhouse at night with no lamp lighted, talking or smoking, they sometimes hear a smooch as if a pebble had been dropped on the glass from above. It is a dytiscus beetle whose compound eyes have mistaken the shine of the glass in the moonlight for the gleam of a pond.

At night some of the whirling beetles, the shiny beetlebeetles seen whirling in incessant circles in corners by the bank, make a quite audible and almost musical sound upon the water.—Spectator.

She Showed Him Her Work.

The woman had her arms in the tub and was fiercely scrubbing one dirty garment after another. Book agents don't often penetrate to that part of Chicago, but this one did. He knocked on the front door until he was tired, and then he went around to the back door. The woman was hobbling up and down over the washboard.

"Good morning, madam," said the book agent pleasantly.

"Good mornin'," said the woman shortly.

"Pleasant day," observed the book agent, sparring for an opening.

"Good enough," answered the woman.

"Excuse me, madam," said the book agent, "but I have here a work that I would like to show you."

"Have you?" answered the woman.

"Well, I've got a lot of work that I'd like to show you." She took one soapy hand out of the tub and waved it at a great pile of dirty clothes.

"That's my work," went on the woman. "If your work can beat that, all right; if it can't, why, skip out."

The book agent skipped.—Chicago Tribune.

Beavers' Teeth.

Of the cutting power of the beaver's teeth Frank H. Risteen says in Rod and Gun:

"The beaver is really a sort of portable pulp mill, grinding up most any kind of wood that comes his way. I once measured a white birch tree, 22 inches through, cut down by a beaver. A single beaver generally, if not always, amputates the tree, and when it comes down the whole family fall to and have a regular frolic with the bark and branches. A big beaver will bring down a fair sized sapling, say three inches through, in about two minutes and a large tree in about an hour.

"One of the queerest facts about the beaver is the rapidity with which his long, chisel shaped teeth will recover from an injury. I have known beavers to break their teeth in biting a trap, and when I caught them again ten days afterward you couldn't see a sign of the break. The teeth had grown out to their former perfection in that short period."

Curiosities of the Cacao Tree.

The cultivation of cacao, says a writer in The Scientific American, is an inviting agricultural pursuit in Trinidad and parts of Venezuela. The cacao tree cannot withstand strong sunshine, and the young plants have to be shaded by banana or plantain trees and later, when they attain their growth, by tall trees known as "humortelles," or the "mother of the cacao." These make a kind of canopy over the entire plantation. The fruit of the cacao tree is a pod resembling a cucumber and growing on the trunk or large branches, where it "looks as though it were artificially attached." The seeds are like large, thick lima beans imbedded in pulp. These form the cacao beans of commerce. The processes of curing and drying require much attention.

Uaddy Things to Carry.

Few people carry pocket scissors of the folding sort. Those that do never part with them. Convenient for manufacture, to cut a clipping from a paper at a moment's notice, a string, etc., they answer almost every purpose of the pocketknife and are much more convenient to handle. Give a person accustomed to their use a knife and the pocket scissors, and he will part with the former first.—Hardware.

So They Do, Some of Them.

The teacher had been giving a class of youngsters some ideas of adverbs and how to make them, and to test her training she put a few questions: "Birds of a feather—do what?" "Lay eggs," piped a small boy before anybody else had a chance to speak.

Unappreciative.

"You find spring water a very great advantage in drinking, I presume?" "Oh, I don't know," said the milkman. "The average person buying milk doesn't know the difference between spring water and any other kind."—Detroit Journal.

M'KINLEY'S PAN-AMERICAN SPEECH

Delivered at Buffalo on the Day Before He Was Shot.

The speech delivered by President McKinley at Buffalo on Thursday, Sept. 5, the day before his attempted assassination, is regarded as one of the best public addresses which he ever made. He was introduced to the vast crowd of auditors which packed the esplanade of the exposition grounds by President Milburn, who said simply:

"Ladies and gentlemen, the president."

When the cheering had subsided, President McKinley spoke as follows:

President Milburn, Director General Buchanan, Commissioners, Ladies and Gentlemen—I am glad to be again in the city of Buffalo and exchange greetings with her people, to whose generous hospitality I am not a stranger and with whose good will I have been repeatedly and signally honored. Today I have additional satisfaction in meeting and giving welcome to the foreign representatives assembled here, whose presence and participation in this exposition have contributed in so marked a degree to its interest and success. To the commissioners of the Dominion of Canada and the British colonies, the French colonies, the republics of Mexico and of Central and South America and the commissioners of Cuba and Porto Rico, who share with us in this undertaking, we give the hand of fellowship and felicitate with them upon the triumphs of art, science, education and manufacture which the old has bequeathed to the new century.

Expositions are the timekeepers of progress. They record the world's advancement. They stimulate the energy, enterprise and intellect of the people and quicken human genius. They go into the home. They broaden and brighten the daily life of the people. They open mighty storehouses of information to the student. Every exposition, great or small, has helped to some onward step. Comparison of ideas is always educational and as such instructs the brain and hand of man. Friendly rivalry follows, which is the spur to industrial improvement, the inspiration to useful invention and to high endeavor in all departments of human activity.

It exacts a study of the wants, comforts and even the whims of the people and recognizes the efficacy of high quality and new prices to win their favor. The quest for trade is an incentive to men of business to devise, invent, improve and economize in cost of production. Business life, whether among ourselves or with other peoples, is ever a sharp struggle for success. It will be none the less so in the future. Without competition we would be clinging to the clumsy and antiquated processes of farming and manufacture and the methods of business of long ago, and the twentieth would be no further advanced than the eighteenth century. But though commercial competitors are commercial enemies, we must not be.

Progress in the Past.

The Pan-American exposition has done its work thoroughly, presenting in its exhibits evidences of the highest skill and illustrating the progress of the human family in the western hemisphere. This portion of the earth has no cause for humiliation for the part it has performed in the march of civilization. It has not accomplished everything; far from it. It has simply done its best, and without vanity or boastfulness and recognizing the manifest achievements of others it invites the friendly rivalry of all the powers in the peaceful pursuits of trade and commerce and will co-operate with all in advancing the highest and best interests of humanity. The wisdom and energy of all the nations are none too great for the world's work. The success of art, science, industry and invention is an international asset and a common glory.

After all, how near one to the other is every part of the world! Modern inventions have brought into close relations widely separated peoples and made them better acquainted. Geographic and political divisions will continue to exist, but distances have been effaced. Swift ships and fast trains are becoming cosmopolitan. They invade fields which a few years ago were impenetrable. The world's products are exchanged as never before, and with increasing transportation facilities come increasing knowledge and larger trade. Prices are fixed with mathematic precision by supply and demand. The world's selling prices are regulated by market and crop reports.

We travel greater distances in a shorter space of time and with more ease than was ever dreamed of by the fathers. Isolation is no longer possible or desirable. The same important news is read, though in different languages, the same day in all Christendom. The telegraph keeps us advised of what is occurring everywhere, and the press foreshadows with more or less accuracy the plans and purposes of the nations. Market prices of products and of securities are hourly known in every commercial mart, and the investments of the people extend beyond their own national boundaries into the remotest parts of the earth. Vast transactions are conducted and international exchanges are made by the tick of the cable. Every event of interest is immediately bulletined.

The quick gathering and transmission of news, like rapid transit, are of recent origin and are only made possible by the genius of the inventor and the courage of the investor. It took a special messenger of the government, with every facility known at the time for rapid travel, nineteen days to go from the city of Washington to New Orleans with a message to General Jackson that the war with England had ceased and a treaty of peace had been signed. How different now! We reached General Miles in Porto Rico by cable, and he was able through the military telegraph to stop his army on the firing line with the message that the United States and Spain had signed a protocol suspending hostilities.

We knew almost instantly of the first shots fired at Santiago, and the subsequent surrender of the Spanish forces was known at Washington within less than an hour of its consummation. The first ship of Cervera's fleet had hardly emerged from that historic harbor when the fact was flashed to our capital, and the swift destruction that followed was announced immediately through the wonderful medium of telegraphy. So accustomed are we to safe and easy communication with distant lands that its temporary interruption even in ordinary times results in loss and inconvenience. We shall never forget the days of anxious waiting and awful suspense when no information was permitted to be sent from Peking and the diplomatic representatives of the nations in China, cut off from all communication inside and outside of the walled capital, were surrounded by an angry and misguided mob that threatened their lives, nor the joy that thrilled the world when a single message from the government of the United States brought through our minister the first news of the safety of the besieged diplomats.

At the beginning of the nineteenth century there was not a mile of steam railroad on the globe. Now there are enough miles to make its circuit many times. Then there was not a line of electric telegraph. Now we have a vast mileage traversing all lands and all seas. God and man have linked the nations together. No nation can longer be indifferent to any other, and as we are brought more and more in touch with each other the less occasion is there for misunderstandings and the stronger the disposition when we have differences to adjust them in the court of arbitration, which is the noblest forum for the settlement of international disputes.

Unexampled Prosperity.

My fellow citizens, trade statistics indicate that this country is in a state of unexampled prosperity. The figures are almost appalling. They show that we are utilizing our fields and forests and mines and that we are furnishing profitable employment to the millions of workmen throughout the United States, bringing comfort and happiness to their homes and making it possible to lay by savings for old age and disability. That all the people are participating in this great prosperity is seen in every American community and shown by the enormous and unprecedented deposits in our savings banks. Our duty is the care and security of these deposits, and their safe investment demands the highest integrity and the best business capacity of those in charge of these depositories of the people's earnings.

We have a vast and intricate business, built up through years of toil and struggle, in which every part of the country has its stake, which will not permit of either neglect or of undue selfishness. No narrow, sordid policy will subvert it. The greatest skill and wisdom on the part of the manufacturers and producers will be required to hold and increase it. Our industrial enterprises which have grown to such great proportions affect the homes and occupations of the people and the welfare of the country. Our capacity to produce has developed so enormous and our products have so multiplied that the problem of more markets requires our urgent and immediate attention. Only a broad and enlightened policy will keep what we have. No other policy will get more. In these times of marvelous business energy and gain we ought to be looking to the future, strengthening the weak places in our industrial and commercial systems that we may be ready for any storm or strain.

Need of Reciprocity.

By sensible trade arrangements which will not interrupt our home production we shall extend the outlets for our increasing surplus. A system which provides a mutual exchange of commodities is manifestly essential to the continued and healthful growth of our export trade. We must not repose in fancied security that we can forever sell everything and buy little or nothing. If such a thing were possible, it would not be best for us or for those with whom we deal. We should take from our customers such of their products as we can use without harm to our industries and labor. Reciprocity is the natural outgrowth of our wonderful industrial development under the domestic policy now firmly established. What we produce beyond our domestic consumption must have vent abroad. The excess must be relieved through a foreign outlet, and we should sell everywhere we can and buy wherever the buying will enlarge our sales and productions and thereby make a greater demand for home labor. The period of exclusiveness is past. The expansion of our trade and commerce is the pressing problem. Commercial wars are unprofitable. A policy of good will and friendly trade relations will prevent reprisals. Reciprocity treaties are in harmony with the spirit of the times; measures of retaliation are not.

If, perchance, some of our tariffs are no longer needed for revenue or to encourage and protect our industries at home, why should they not be employed to extend and promote our markets abroad? Then, too, we have inadequate steamship services. New lines of steamers have already been put in commission between the Pacific coast ports of the United States and those of the western coasts of Mexico and Central and South America. These should be followed up with direct steamship lines between the eastern coast of the United States and South American ports.

One of the needs of the times is direct commercial lines from our vast fields of production to the fields of consumption that we have but barely touched. Next in advantage to having the thing to sell is to have the convenience to carry it to the buyer. We must encourage our merchant marine. We must have more ships. They must be under the American flag, built and manned and owned by Americans. These will not only be profitable in a commercial sense; they will be messengers of peace and amity wherever they go. We must build the isthmian canal, which will unite the two oceans and give a straight line of water communication with the western coasts of Central and South America and Mexico. The construction of a Pacific cable cannot be longer postponed.

A Fraternity of Republics.

In the furtherance of these objects of national life and concern you are performing an important part. This exposition would have touched the heart of that American statesman whose mind was ever alert and thought ever constant for a larger commerce and a truer fraternity of the republics of the new world. His broad American spirit is felt and manifested here. He needs no identification to an assemblage of Americans anywhere, for the name of Blaine is inseparably associated with the pan-American movement, which finds his practical and substantial expression and which we all hope will be firmly advanced by the pan-American congress that assembles this autumn in the capital of Mexico. The good work will go on. It cannot be stopped. These buildings will disappear; this creation of art and beauty and industry will perish from sight, but their influence will remain to Make it live beyond its too short living With praises and thanksgiving.

Who can tell the new thoughts that have been awakened, the ambitions fired and the high achievements that will be wrought through this exposition? Gentlemen, let us ever remember that our interest is in concord, not conflict, and that our real enmities rest in the victories of peace, not those of war. We hope that all who are represented here may be moved to higher and nobler effort for their own and the world's good and that out of this city may come not only greater commerce and trade for us all, but, more essential than these, relations of mutual respect, confidence and friendship which will deepen and endure. Our earnest prayer is that God will graciously vouchsafe prosperity, happiness and peace to all our neighbors and like blessings to all the peoples and powers of earth.

Witty Robert Barr.

Robert Barr when asked for his favorite quotation responded with the following verse and its accompanying comment, says The Windsor Magazine: One who never turned his back, but marched breast forward; Never doubted clouds would break, Never dreamed, though right were worsted, wrong would triumph; Held we fall to rise, are baffled to fight better, Sleep to wake.

But Mr. Barr can never be serious in a letter, whatever he may be in his quotation. He has long been celebrated as one of the wittiest letter writers of the day. However short his note may be, it is long enough to afford him an opening for some little touch of the humorous. In the present instance he writes: "The above is my favorite quotation. Whenever you want something helpful, you know, look up the writings of the talented B's—Robert Burns, Robert Browning, Robert Buchanan, Robert Bruce or Robert Barr."

How New Zealand Punishes Crime.

New Zealand has its punishment to crime more nearly than most countries. Thus, at Waingahou, when certain sawyers troubled their neighbors by their drunken frolics, the delinquents were made to pay the fines imposed in such labor as they were accustomed to and were set to saw wood with which to build a prison. The result was that, rather than transgress again, they vanished from the locality as soon as the edifice was complete.

It Rained Copper.

The cadets of Annapolis sat in the side aisles of the chapel, leaving the center aisles for the officers and their families, says Dr. Cyrus Townsend Brady in "Under Tops and Tents." When the offering was received, the two boys charged with the duty of passing the plates did not make the slightest effort to circulate them among the cadets, for we never had any money. They would walk rapidly down the aisle and then come deliberately up the middle, gathering thence what they would. One Sunday the chaplain announced that he would preach a missionary sermon the next Sunday. It did not have the ordinary effect in emptying the church, for we were obliged to go as usual.

During the week it occurred to the bright mind of a senior, or first class man, who is now a prominent New York financier, that it would be well for the cadets to make an offering. So he sent out to the bank on Saturday morning and succeeded in smuggling in over 300 copper cents, which he distributed 1 cent per boy to the Episcopal battalion. We stationed a strong, long armed man on the outside seat of the first pew in each aisle. The chaplain made a piteous appeal for pennies even, and when the astonished cadets who passed the plates started on their perfunctory promenade the strong, one armed men aforesaid promptly relieved them of the metal plates, and each one dropped in one copper cent with an ominous crash and then deliberately handed the plate to the next boy, who did the same thing. It rained copper cents for about ten minutes. The chaplain was dreadfully disconcerted, the officers fidgeted and looked angry. Some of them laughed, and the cadets preserved a deadly solemnity. The affair was a striking success.

The Twentieth Century.

The advent of the new century is to be commemorated by the Newton GRAPHIC in the publication of a handsomely bound volume entitled, "Newton, The Garden City of the Commonwealth, 1874-1901." It will contain valuable and interesting historical matter, fully illustrated with half ton engravings of churches, schools, residences, street views, parks, etc. The history will tell of leading events, characters and progress of the city, and the many advantages of Newton as a beautiful and desirable place of residence will be fully shown. The volume will also contain the portraits and biographies of representative men who, in their lives, their work or their influence have made Newton of to-day the garden city of the Commonwealth and of New England.

It is believed that such a work will commend itself to the citizens of Newton as bringing together a carefully collated record of the lives of men who have contributed to the welfare of our city; men of whom we are justly proud as educators, lawyers, physicians, clergymen and men of affairs. Such a publication at this time will give to the present, an up to date account of the city and will bequeath to the future a legacy of what Newton was at the beginning of what promises to be a most remarkable century.

His Spelling System.

Dobbs met his friend Turner in the train. They were both going to Birmingham and stopped at the same hotel. Turner registered his name "E. K. Philthologyrrrh."

Dobbs, noticing it, exclaimed, "Here, what are you using such a foreign, outlandish name for?"

"I am not assuming any foreign name," replied Turner.

"What kind of a name is it, then?" "That is my identical old name, and it is English too—pronounced 'Turner.'"

"I can't see how you make 'Turner' out of those 13 letters; besides, what is your object in spelling that way?" asked Dobbs.

"Well, you see, nobody ever noticed my name on the register when I wrote it 'Turner,' the latter explained, 'but since I commenced writing it 'Philthologyrrrh' I set them all guessing. It is, as I said before, English spelling. 'Phth' is the sound of 't' in 'phthila,' 'olo' is the sound of 'ur' in 'colone,' 'gn' there is the 'n' in 'gnat,' 'yrrh' is the sound of 'er' in 'myrrh.' Now, if that doesn't spell 'Turner' what does it spell?"—London Standard.

Optimism.

When the optimist was dispossessed and thrown, along with his household impedimenta, into the cold street, he chuckled furiously.

"Why do you laugh, my friend?" inquired a passerby.

"Because I have just now been emancipated from toil," replied the optimist. "For years my life has been one long struggle to keep the wolf from the door. But now that I have been deprived of the door I no longer am compelled to toil. Sweet, indeed, are the uses of adversity!"

Then the optimist walked off, whistling gaily, into the sunshine.—New York Sun.

A Task.

To be honest, to be kind, to earn a little and to spend less, to make, upon the whole, a family happier by his presence, to renounce where that shall be necessary and not to be imbibed, to keep a few friends, but these without capitulation; above all, on the same grim conditions to keep friends with himself—here is a task for all that a man has of fortitude and delicacy.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

Most Curious Thing.

Professor Trotter—A woman, madam.

A Communication.

Mr. Editor—Allow me to speak a few words in favor of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I suffered for three years with the bronchitis and could not sleep at night. I tried several doctors and various patent medicines, but could get nothing to give me any relief until my wife got a bottle of this valuable medicine, which has completely relieved me.—W. S. Literary Notes

The Smart Set for October opens with an amusing novelette entitled "The Career of Mrs. Osborne," by S. Carleton and Helen Milette, the latter the author of "Miss Vandeleur, Pirate," one of the successes of last year. The present story narrates the adventures of two charming young women who escape from tiresome country relatives and take an apartment in London under the fictitious chaperonage of "Mrs. Osborne." Their escapades, their many devices to avoid detection and their final disposition of "Mrs. Osborne" are highly diverting. Richard Le Gallienne contributes a masterly short story to the number, "The Household Gods," that details a woman's struggle with temptation. "The Splendor of Dead Days" is a fascinating article by Marvin Dana that compares the magnificence of former ages with the luxury of the present. Julian Gordon (Mrs. Van Rensselaer Cruger), a regular contributor to "The Smart Set," writes for this issue a singular and piquant story, "The Black Swan," the study of a light of love of Paris. Edgar Saltus contributes a surprising tale, entitled "A Bouquet of Illusions," and Clinton Ross a bright story, "The Comedy of the Ruined Gentleman." Besides these features there are thirty or more other signed contributions of varied interest, notably the poems, "Sonnets to a Lover," by Myrtle Reed, and "Invocation," by Charles G. D. Roberts. All in all, the number is the most notable and entertaining yet issued by this cleverest of the popular magazines.

When you want a pleasant physic try the new remedy, Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. They're easy to take and pleasant in effect. Price 25 cents, at all druggists.

NOMINATIONS

There are no contests in any of the wards. A Shocking Calamity

"Lately befell a railroad laborer," writes Dr. A. Kellett, of Williford, Ark. "His foot was badly crushed, but Bucklen's Arnica Salve quickly cured him. It's simply wonderful for Burns, Boils, Piles and all skin eruptions. It's the world's champion healer. Cure guaranteed. 25c. Sold by Arthur Hudson, druggist."

Dr. Shinn's Words.

At Grace church last Sunday morning, Dr. Shinn's text was from Job 35:10, "Who giveth songs in the night." The idea he developed was that singing songs in the night was an expression of confidence in God in a time of trouble.

After citing some illustrations of men's "showing their trust when the night around them was black, he referred to the national sorrow thus:

We have reached a period in our national affairs when we have special reason to consider the divine purpose to bring good out of evil. We stand today bewildered and distressed over a most tragic event which spreads its pall throughout our whole land. A nation mourns the loss of its chief magistrate, cut down in the midst of his usefulness, slain by the hand of an assassin.

It was a most unexpected tragedy. If it had come in some hour of partisan strife or in some hour of business prostration, when men were suffering for the lack of bread—it would not have been so startling. It came when the country is in great prosperity and when there is almost the entire absence of party heat. It came too, at a place where of all others labor is crowned—at the great industrial exposition where the implements of the work shop and the field take precedence of the rifle and the sword. Strange that a poor insignificant creature at such a time and in such a place should be able to do the devil's work and plunge a world into sorrow! Strange that the victim should have been the man who has so steadily grown in the affections of the American people. Yes, it is all terribly bewildering. We cannot understand it. We cannot understand it.

We have to fall back upon the fact that though the heavens are dark—the Lord is still reigning and that He can bring good out of evil. He can still enable men to sing songs in the night.

It is hard for us to think of singing any exultant song today while we prepare the dead body of the President for its burial—but we can sing the quiet song of trust and confidence that all will be well in the end.

We must not let mere resentment at the author of this dreadful calamity carry us out of union with Him who is Lord of heaven and earth. "Father forgive them for they know not what they do," was the prayer of One whose life ended upon the cross and who forgave all who brought Him there.

With the most utter loathing of the crime itself and of all the false teachings which have led up to it—we may yet pity those who knew not what they did when they raised their hands against the constituted authority.

It is not the time for wrath, even though the wheels of justice move swiftly to punish the guilty, but it is the time to ask what we can do to prevent the spread of principles injurious to the well being of the state, and inimical to the best interests of society.

When we ask such a question we come back to the old reply that which no better can ever be given. Here it is—the safety of the republic, and the welfare of society are best secured when the religion of Christ takes most hold of the hearts of the people.

This is a Christian nation. It was founded to be a Christian nation. Anarchism is unchristian. This is a Christian people, although so many live unchristianly and its destiny is as yet unfulfilled. It has a future as yet unrealized.

Would you know how best to show your detestation of the crime which has laid low our ruler? Would you know how best you can show your abhorrence of the principles which have made that crime possible? Would you know how best to make your nation rise up to the front?

There are ways better than having every loyal man in the country have a hand in the actual execution of the criminal a few months or a few weeks hence. Better than to have every loyal man in the land take an actual part in expelling every suspected anarchist from the country. Better than all violent talk, better than all mob violence, is the return to the practice of the religion which of late has seemed to be in decline.

Let us seek to be true Christians men. Let us teach the doctrines and the duties of the Christian life more clearly. Let us urge men more strongly to love God and their fellow men. #### Women on the School Board.

In 1869 at a crowded caucus of the Republican party of Newton, then a town, the following resolution was adopted by a great majority after a lengthy discussion, participated in by strong men from the different sections of the town:
Resolved, That it is the opinion of the Republicans of Newton that the best interests of our schools demand that women should be elected upon the school board. In 1872 the nominating committee of the Republican caucus of which the writer was chairman, proposed the names of five women of different villages as members of the school board, who were elected without opposition so far as can be recalled.

That women have since served upon the school board of our city until within two or three years with signal and universally acknowledged ability is true. Why are there none upon the board at present guarding and promoting our children's interests as women only can?

Schools Closed.

The following notice has been issued by the school department:
Newtonville, Sept. 17, 1901.

To the Teachers and Pupils of the Newton Public Schools:

Thursday, September nineteenth, nineteen hundred and one, having been appointed by the President of the United States, and the Governor of Massachusetts as a day of mourning and prayer in memory of our martyred President, the public schools of this city will be closed on that day.

Perhaps I hardly need to recommend to our young people that they observe the day according to its character, and not as, in any sense, a holiday.
They should refrain from athletic contests and sports, and give at least a part of the day to the contemplation of the character, life, and services of our late President, who, beloved at home and honored abroad, has fallen by the hand of an assassin, the enemy of all that the Public School represents.

God save our Country and the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. By authority of the President of the Newton School Board.

Albert B. Fifield,
Supt. of Schools.

Death of an old Soldier.

William E. Dewick an old resident of Newton, died at his home on Walnut street, last Sunday, aged 81 years.
Mr. Dewick was a native of England, was born May 24th, 1820, and his birthday was the same as the late Queen Victoria. He served in the English army when a young man and later coming to this country served in the Mexican and Civil wars. For these services he received a pension.
A widow survives him. The funeral was held from the Newton cemetery chapel Tuesday at 4 o'clock, in charge of Rev. E. T. Sullivan and a delegation from the G. A. R. were present.

Queer Indian Beliefs.

There is an odd feature in the theology of the small Indian tribe of the Bella Coola, which inhabit British Columbia in about latitude 52. They believe that there are five worlds, one above the other, and the middle one is our own world, the earth. Above it are two heavens, and under it are two underworlds. In the upper heaven is the supreme deity, who is a woman, and she doesn't meddle much with the affairs in the second world below her.
The zenith is the center of the lower heaven, and here is the house of the gods, in which live the sun and the rest of the deities.

Our own earth is believed to be an island swimming in the ocean. The first underworld from the earth is inhabited by ghosts who can return when they wish to heaven, from which place they may be sent down to our earth. If then they misbehave again, they are cast into the lower of the underworlds, and from this bourne no ghostly traveler returns.

The Bella Coola are sun worshippers, for Senex, the sun, the master of the house of gods, who also is called "the father" and "the sacred one," is the only deity to whom the tribe pray. Each family of the Bella Coola has its own traditions and its own form of the current traditions, so that in the mythology of the tribe there are countless contradictions. When any one not a member of a clan tries to tell a tradition which does not belong to his clan, it is like a white man trying to tell another's joke—he is considered as appropriating the property right which does not belong to him.

Hard Ducks to Kill.

The screaming walloon is a hard duck to kill. Its hide is very tough and is thickly covered with feathers and down. Besides the bird is a great diver, one of the kind that used to "dive at the flash" when hunted with the old arm that flashed when fired. It is of very little value for table use, being so tough. The only way to manage it at all is to skin it and parboil it in a big pot with plenty of water. The negroes make caps of walloon skins.

"They are great ducks for diving," says a well known Trux Avon river progger.

"They can dive quicker, go down deeper, remain under water longer and come up further away than any other duck that frequents our waters. I remember once I succeeded in killing a walloon, and, being short of game for the table, I determined to cook my bird. I got a negro to skin it, giving him the hide for his trouble. After being cleaned we put it in a great pot full of water and under it kindled a hot fire. After awhile I wanted to see how the cooking of my duck progressed and lifted the top off the boiling pot, but there was so much steam escaping I could not see into the pot and struck a match over it. The blamed walloon, sir, dived at the flash of the match. It disappeared and has never been seen since."—Baltimore Sun.

A Lesson to Humorists.

One cannot safely assume in these days that there is any region in which such and such a Journal is not read.
Recently a certain humorist needed a rest and went and stopped in a cottage in a remote village by the sea. His sitting room opened on the kitchen, where his landlady, a woman widely esteemed as a person of great acumen and a maker of phrases, was wont to receive the neighbors. He listened and put both landlady and neighbors into some amusing sketches which were promptly published in a London magazine. A month or two went by. Then one afternoon he came back to the cottage to meet and cover before an indignant matron, who told him, among other things, that he had one hour in which to pack his traps and quit the cottage. She was not going to have an eavesdropper in her house, and she added a significant hint to the effect that the people of the village were of the same opinion and might be betrayed into an attempt to give a forcible demonstration of their views.—London Post.

Now They Are Married.

A bashful young man went three times to ask a beautiful young lady if he might be the partner of her joys and sorrows and other household furniture, but each time his heart failed him, and he took the question away unpopped.

She saw the anguish of his soul and had compassion on him. So the next time he came she asked him if he had thought to bring a screwdriver with him.

He blushed and wanted to know what for.

And she, in the fullness of her heart, said she did not know but that he would want to screw up his courage before he left.

He took the hint and the girl.—Pearson's Weekly.

The Jaw of an Otter.

You can find an example of nature's adaptation of the jaw to use in the case of certain carnivora, like the otter—a big vessel that has acquired aquatic habits. The jaws of such beasts are so fixed in the sockets that dislocation is impossible. In some instances you cannot, even after the animal is dead, separate the jaw from the head. This arrangement is evidently designed to enable the beast to bite to the greatest advantage without danger that the chewing apparatus will come loose.

Cause of Thought.

"You look thoughtful tonight, Smith," remarked Brown as he stretched himself on two chairs.

"Yes," said Smith. "I have just got a note from the landlady."

"What does she say?"

"She says that I must pay my board at once, or her daughter will sue me for breach of promise. I'm thinking what I'd better do."—Tit-Bits.

NEWTON BOWED IN GRIEF.

Illness preventing the pastor from officiating, J. H. Pillsbury, principal of the Waban school for boys kindly led in the opening address. He ably pictured the characters of history, their merits and demerits. He brought his hearers up to the time and administration of William Mc-Kinley, clearly and eloquently presented the character of the martyred President in its lofty wisdom and Christian faith. He was followed by Rev. R. F. True, pastor of the Baptist church, who touched the congregation deeply by his impressive words on the life and character of the noble man for whom they mourned. The singing was in the spirit of the address. The choir sang "Lead Kindly Light." Rev. Mr. True sang with true musical feeling an appropriate solo, and the congregation joined in singing "Nearer My God to Thee," and "America." It was an inspiring occasion.

A mass meeting of the French residents of this city was held Tuesday evening at the Athenaeum on Dalby adopted on the death of the late President McKinley and incidentally an urgent appeal was made to those present to become naturalized.

BOSTON AMUSEMENTS.

Columbia Theatre—New plays come and go, and few there are which out-live the second season. Such has not been the case of Mr. Edward E. Rice's "Evangeline," which has retained its popularity with the masses for over twenty-five years. At its reproduction Monday night at the Columbia Theatre, Boston, in its new garb and brilliant scenic surroundings,
"Evangeline" was as wholesome, bright and entertaining as when it first delighted Boston theatre-goers for nearly three hundred consecutive nights. Of course, much has been done in the way of changing the music and furnishing up the "situations" and "business" of the piece, but the frame work of the old "Evangeline" (and a better structure for burlesque could not be found) is there, and a cast in every way capable delights the enormous crowds now witnessing the popular piece. The extraordinarily shapely and goodlooking girls in the large chorus are attracting much attention, and the brilliancy of the ensemble is such as has seldom been witnessed on a Boston stage. Added to the magnificence of the performance at the Columbia is the attractiveness of the promenades, in which smoking is allowed and refreshments are served. The Columbia theatre prices are only 25c, 50c, 75c, and $1 for reserved seats. Special matinees are given Wednesdays for ladies and children. The prices then are only 15c, 25c, and 50c cents, and no smoking is allowed and no liquors sold on the premises.

BOSTON MUSIC HALL: VAUDEVILLE.

From present indications the vaudeville show at Boston Music Hall next week will be one of exceptional all-round strength. The bookings include George Thatcher, the veteran minstrel, whose black face monologue is always bright and humorous, the Three Barretts whose club juggling is said to be original and very interesting, the Musical Bells, in a very pretty instrumental act Dooley and Fowly, a pair of blackface comedians who are exceedingly comical, Leonore and St. Clair, who make specialty of dancing the Tanakas, Japanese top spinners, illusionists and necromancers, picturesquely costumed and skilful at all their tricks the DeBeau-monts, in a singing and dancing skit, and the vitagraph, with motion views covering the tragic events of the past two weeks in connection with the assassination and death of the late President McKinley. The fall season in vaudeville has opened with a rush at Boston Music Hall and this popular theatre is the resort of all who appreciate a good variety show, clean, wholesome, novel, and well balanced at all times.

On account of the very large business of the Adirondacks, the Boston & Albany R. R. announces that its summer train service to these sections will be continued through the month of September, and as far into October as the business seems to warrant.

"A PRIVILEGE."

It is the privilege of every person to contribute something toward the current expenses of our Young Men's Christian Association, and I believe one that should be accepted by all in this portion of our city.

This institution should have almost as strong a hold upon our hearts as our own homes, for it serves to develop young men on all sides, thereby making of them Christian citizens and competent and reliable workers in any field.

If the old saying is true, that a man's heart is where his money is, then I would venture to suggest that every one place a few cents at least in the Association's treasury. Our new year is about to begin, and we solicit the gifts of every person, old and young. Gifts of any size will be gratefully received.

The results of last year's work warrant the heartiest co-operation of the public.

ALLAN C. EMERY,
Vice President, and Chairman Finance Committee.

SCHOOL BOARD.

Will Need $202,339 for 1902 Expences.

Considerable Amount of Routine Business.

Wednesday evening an important meeting of the school board for the transaction of a considerable amount of routine business was held.

In his monthly report Superintendent of Schools A. B. Fifield said that the membership on Sept. 20 amounted to 5601, an increase of 250 or equaling 4 per cent. as compared with last year's figures.

Further he stated that seven new rooms had been opened this year. He emphasized the fact that the amount appropriated for incidentals would not be sufficient to meet all the demands of the coming three months of 1901, and that the calls for several requisites would have to be placed on file for the present.

Mr. Fifield announced that he was entirely satisfied with the excellent working force of masters and teachers and stated in that connection that he made these temporary appointments: Grace M. Hill, salary $600; Marion E. Buswell, salary $600; Ella L. Howe, salary $600; L. A. H. Jackson, salary $300; Mabel G. Bateman, salary $300, and Lillian A. Young at a salary of $300.

Continuing he said, "A year ago, the public school at Waban was enlarged, and two teachers added. It was confidently believed that the attendance would increase materially, but the school opens this fall with less than the minimum number of pupils in two rooms. This fact has already been brought to the attention of the board in connection with the estimates for the fiscal year, and one salary has been deducted from the appropriation for that school. The question now arises whether we shall continue the present number of rooms until January 1, 1902. In order to place this before the board for decision, I have, acting upon the suggestion of one of the members, prepared an order suspending the rules in this case."

The school department's budget for 1902 was considered in the form of a report of the finance committee. The chief discussion was over the cost and purchase of coal and the capacity of the bins, etc. No fault was found but the question of expediency was dwelt upon at length.

It was finally voted to request the board of aldermen to appropriate for the school department during the coming year $202,339.

Orders were adopted as follows: Establishing a free evening school at Nonantum; a free drawing school at Newtonville; providing free transportation to pupils coming from Newton Centre to the free evening school at Nonantum, providing their average attendance was satisfactory; changing the name of the Adams district to the Horace Mann district; appropriating $16,107 for September department expenses; changing the name of the Waban school to the Roger Wolcott school; appointing Mary E. Jordan an unassigned teacher at a salary of $600, and referring the question of transferring the Lincoln school from Ward 2's district to Ward 1, to the committee on rules.

Banquet of Claffin Guards.

The thirty-first anniversary dinner of the Claffin Guards, Co C, 5th regiment infantry M. V. M., will be given by the Claffin Guards and the Claffin Guards Veteran Association at Army hall on Saturday evening, October 12. The affair will be preceded by a parade and a shoot at the Riverside range between teams representing the active company and the veterans.

Fatal Accident at Waban Hill.

About 8.30 Tuesday morning, while Martin McCarthy, aged 37, a stone mason, living at 180 Market street, Brighton, was working on the addition to the covered reservoir at Waban hill, a portion of a derrick, known as a scales box, containing a large amount of stone, fell on him. McCarthy was terribly crushed. He was picked up and attended by a physician. Later he was removed to the Newton hospital in the police ambulance. He died at 1 Wednesday morning. McCarthy was employed by T. Stuart & Sons corporation.

Death of Mrs. Jones.

Mrs. Alice F. Jones, widow of the late George H. Jones, died at her home on Waban street last Friday afternoon aged 85 years. Until his decease Mr. Jones, who was a man of large wealth, was active in philanthropic work and was one of the founders of the Newton Library. Funeral services were held from the family residence Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock and were conducted by Rev. Dr. William H. Davis of Eliot church, the deceased pastor, assisted by Rev. Dr. Wolcott's Calkins. The interment was in the Newton cemetery.

ALDERMEN

Again Amend Street Railway Franchise

Granted B. &amp; W. St. Railway Co. in Boylston St.

An adjourned meeting of the aldermen was held last Monday evening to consider the matter of street railway location in Boylston street, and Aldermen Chesley, Ensign, Hubbard, Hutchinson, Lothrop, Lowe, Lyman, Mellen, Norris, Pond, Pulsifer, Saltonstall, Stickney, Wardwell, Weed, Weeks and Weldon were present when President Daily called to order at 7.45 o'clock.

Alderman Lothrop drew the names of Joseph L. Kent, Waltham street, and Edward M. Rumery, Otis street as jurors of the October session for the Superior Court.

The street railway matter was then taken up in the form of an amended order recommended by the committee granting a double track location on Boylston street to the Boston & Worcester Street Railway Co., on conditions prescribing the kind of construction to be used, the lighting of the entire street with incandescent lights, the widening of the street to 90 feet, and construction of same to finished sub-grade with two roadways 20 feet in width, sidewalks, and gutters and a reserved space for tracks 32 feet in width; the granting of free transfers; the use of its tracks to other Newton corporations, and the filing of a $100,000 bond.

On request of Alderman Mellen, ex-Alderman Thos. White, who had been employed by the Mayor to investigate the matter of land damages, was invited to address the board.

Mr. White said that he and ex-Alderman A. H. Roffe made a detailed report to the Mayor, and that it showed a total estimate of $33,730.65 for land damages. Quite a number of aldermen had indicated their willingness to talk business as soon as the matter had been settled. The most expensive damage was near the railroad crossing, and he would recommend that at this point, no widening be made until the grade crossing question was settled. This would reduce the above sum by $7000, 407.376 square feet of land will be taken and they have obtained waivers of 186,287 square feet.

Alderman Lothrop stated in reply to a question that he estimated the final cost to the city as $81,000, being $21,000 for drainage, $20,000 for city's share of damages and $40,000 for surfacing.

City Engineer Farnham stated that he believed the surfacing would be demanded within two or three years, and in reply to Alderman Mellen, said that to resurface the present Boylston street would cost $15,000.

A motion to go into the committee of the whole was adopted, an amendment to refer the matter to the street railway committee being defeated.

On reassembling, Alderman Weeks reported for the committee of the whole, recommending that the order coming from the street railway committee with suggestions of the city solicitor be adopted. The report was received and the order unanimously adopted.

An order establishing rate of pay for election officers was referred to the finance committee.

A petition of W. J. Hackett for an additional pool table was referred to the license committee.

A communication from the board of health for sewer construction in West street was referred to the sewer committee.

And at 9.15 o'clock the board adjourned.

To the High School Alumni and Residents of Newton.

To the Editor of the Graphic—

With the opening of our higher institutions of learning begins the football season, a series of contests which now claim precedence, if one may judge by popular support, over all other athletic features of school life. Notices have appeared in the newspapers advising us of the first meeting of the boys of the High school for the formation and practice of this year's team.

This season as for a number of seasons past, the team is handicapped in the absence of a thoroughly capable and prominent collegiate player as a coach. Heretofore the boys have been dependent on the kind efforts of a number of graduates, at different intervals of time. Without the least desire to detract from their efforts, this sort of coaching, especially if carried on by a number at the same time, under no recognized head, is not apt to be directed along a definite line of procedure, or able to discern the main defects in the team, and remedy those defects in the best possible manner. Inasmuch as our boys receive a preparation in a form of athletics, in which they often continue during a college career, it seems most essential that these preparatory steps should be made under the supervision of a capable coach, whose attention will be directed as much toward the health of the players, as toward the mere playing. We are all of us familiar with the ill effects, the young enthusiast sustains in over-training, or carelessness succeeding hard play. The most unwise indulgences of individual members have occurred in previous years, which in the presence of a responsible person would never have been permitted.

Citizens of a neighboring town have associated themselves and have not merely provided the boys of their High school team with suits, but have engaged, at a remuneration for the short season of three months or so, greater than the majority of our young men earn per annum as salaries, an ex-college player, not only of importance and experience, but of ability and judgment. Though ours is a wealthy city, yet an expenditure such as this is not entirely necessary. Contributions of small amounts to the manager of the team, from all the alumni and from as many others who will, would not merely insure the additional success of the team this season, but also the proper direction of the efforts of its several members.

Let others who have more to expend than a small contribution, combine to satisfy the exorbitant demands of the powers that be who have increased the rental one hundred dollars on the play grounds used for a number of years past by the school team.

Of the benefits of foot-ball, so much has already been said and printed in its favor, and again in its disfavor, all of which is probably familiar to the readers of this paper, that it would be superfluous at this time to weigh the merits or demerits of the game. Sufficient it is to say, that the boys recently need the support and hearty co-operation, in this important feature of the year's athletic contests, of all the alumni and other residents of the city who believe in foot-ball as a healthful exercise, as a developer of the boy physically, and as a contributing force to his development mentally.

N. H. S. '98.

As this goes to print am informed that the boys have just engaged on their own responsibility a prominent and very capable coach, who has consented to a remuneration of but one hundred dollars. This will make the expenses for the season mount up to about three hundred dollars.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free. F. J. Cheney Co., Toledo, O.

Whist.

To the Editor of the Graphic—

Sept. 17, 1901.

I read with interest the hand published in your whist department of last week, which was played recently at one of the American Whist Club tournaments, illustrative of the gains made possible by the Massachusetts system. I may add to what you say that I have never known of a loss to be entailed by reason of method, of play a pretty broad statement. I realize, to make of any system.

For years I have been known as an opponent of "systems" in whist, because most of them at times require sacrifices to be made in order to play by them which more than counterbalances their possible value in the long run. But the Massachusetts system allows entire freedom in the opening of a hand and never sacrifices a card of any value to show trump strength or weakness. Instances might be multiplied where gains have been made by its use, and in spite of the best play of the adversary, and, as I have said, in no single instance have I known of a trick to be lost by reason of playing it.

All whist players will agree that "system" is inadequate to win without this playing; but whist playing, coupled with the Massachusetts system, is a great winner. I would be glad to have you republish the system for the benefit of those who did not read your previous exposition of it.

Referring to the utility of playing "system" without playing whist, says the perception that every good player is supposed to have to enable him to take advantage of weak play by the adversary, I give below a deal played at the American Whist Club, where, as a partner, I had the honor to play with one of the present members of the Club's team. The only understanding we had with respect to the system to be employed was that it should be "Ward's game."

For fear of being misunderstood, let me add that I do not regard the opening, or the subsequent play of the hand, by my partner, to be in any way resemble Ward's game, which is what is generally known as the common-sense game. This, as most modern players know, consists mainly in opening the top of sequences, except Ace-King (when the King is led regardless of length); and if a card below a seven is led from a long suit, the lowest is selected instead of fourth best; the play of a pip card followed on the second round by a lower, is usually indicative of trump weakness and a desire to ruff the suit, which is announced to be exhausted in the leader's hand.

AS THE DEAL WAS PLAYED.

Small heart turned East. North, (my partner) to lead. The underlined card wins the trick.

TRICKS	North	East	South	West
1.....	10♠	5♠	A♠	4♠
2.....	3♠	6♠	2♠	Q♠
3.....	7♠	J♠	K♠	8♠
4.....	Q♠	9♠	7♠	3♠
5.....	2♠	K♠	8♠	4♠
6.....	Q♠	J♠	K♠	5♠
7.....	2♥	4♥	K♥	3♥
8.....	A♥	7♥	5♥	6♥
9.....	8♥	9♥	A♥	10♥
10.....	4♥	6♥	J♥	A♥
11.....	9♥	6♥	8♥	A♥
12.....	10♥	J♥	2♥	9♥
13.....	8♥	Q♥	3♥	10♥

North and South 7. East and West 6.

In the first place North, by his lead of ten of spades, followed on the second round by lower card in the suit, told his partner by all the tenets of the common-sense game, that he was out of spades, had less than four trumps, and desired to ruff the suit; also that he had no long suit worth playing for. As a matter of fact, he held a five-card plain suit of diamonds, headed by Queen-ten; four trumps to the Ace, and a possible entry in clubs. The veriest tyro at the game would have found no perplexity as to the proper opening of the hand, which would have been a low diamond in this case the hand would have been played as follows:

AS THE DEAL SHOULD HAVE BEEN PLAYED.

TRICKS	North	East	South	West
1.....	2♠	9♠	K♠	3♠
2.....	6♠	J♠	A♠	4♠
3.....	10♠	K♠	2♠	4♠
4.....	7♠	J♠	K♠	A♠
5.....	Q♠	4♠	8♠	10♠
6.....	2♥	4♥	K♥	3♥
7.....	A♥	7♥	5♥	6♥

Now a good player will stop the trumps. South can have no more trumps. Taking the first trick with the King denied the Queen. He cannot have both Jack and King, else with King, Jack, 10 and 5 he would have taken a finesse on his partner's trump opening of the deuce (showing only four trumps.) He cannot have held Jack and five remaining, or ten and five, else he would have returned the higher of two remaining trumps. Therefore, Queen, Jack and ten are against North, and two of them are in one hand. North therefore properly proceeds to force out one of them, as follows.

TRICKS	North	East	South	West
8.....	Q♠	J♥	2♠	5♠
9.....	8♥	Q♥	3♠	10♥
10.....	9♥	8♠	7♠	9♠
11.....	10♥	5♠	8♠	8♠

A Shocking Calamity

"Lately befell a railroad laborer," writes Dr. A. Kellett, of Willford, Ark. "His foot was badly crushed, but Bucklen's Arnica Salve quickly cured him. ## Police Paragraphs.

No small amount of well earned praise has been bestowed upon the handiwork of the decorators of the police building. While several officers did much towards the success it was Patrolman Charles H. Tainter's master hand that guided the drapers. Altogether the police building was the handsomest in the city and eclipsed many a Boston structure with its fine appearance.

Almost every day there are trials in court of people charged with keeping unlicensed dogs. The law governing the disposition of such cases has been changed during the year, and where formerly a fine of $15, no more and no less was imposed, the maximum alone is $15, while the matter is left to the court's discretion.

Robert Mason, colored, aged 18, was overhauled early Saturday evening by Patrolman Lucey on Grasmere street. The latter was inspecting the unoccupied residence of Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Baldwin and came upon Mason in the orchard. The colored man had a loaded revolver. He was locked up and in court Monday morning was charged with being a tramp. Mason was found guilty and told to leave the city.

Patrick Welsh and James Hargedon were arrested about 11.30 Saturday evening by Sergt. Purcell, charged with drunkenness. They were arraigned on this complaint and also accused of evading their car fares. On each count they were found guilty. For drunkenness they were fined $5 each. The other complaint was placed on file.

When you want a pleasant physic try the new remedy, Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. They are easy to take and pleasant in effect. Price 25 cents, at all druggists.

A Comprehensive Explanation of the Management of Municipal Affairs.

The Auditing Department, Its System and Methods Described This Week.

The fire department has a fascination for every citizen from the youth in school, to the gray haired veteran. We like to see the apparatus tearing through the streets, to watch it at work extinguishing the flames and many people pass the fire stations with halting step, hoping to obtain a glimpse of the hitching-up process.

In this city, the fire department is most efficiently managed and its modest demands in the annual budget are cheerfully granted by succeeding boards of aldermen. It is run without apparent friction, does its work well, and is in a state of high discipline at all times.

This result is primarily due to the personality of its chief, Walter B. Randlett, who has been eighteen years in the service, as assistant chief and chief, and whose reputation as a fire fighter is not confined to the limits of the City of Newton.

The department consists of a chief, assistant chief, 28 permanent men employed as engineers and drivers and over 60 call men. The apparatus consists of three steam and two chemical engines, two trucks and eight hose wagons. Nine stations are maintained and 40 horses used in the work.

The permanent men are on duty for twenty-four hours each day, with three hours allowed for meals and are provided with lodgings at the various stations. Fourteen days' vacation are granted annually and one day's leave of absence in every fourteen days. This leave of absence requires the service of two relief men who rotate from station to station as the leave is granted.

The engineers, where steamers are kept, have general charge of the station, and its heating apparatus and keep everything including the steamer in condition for immediate use. The drivers take care of the horses, stables and harnesses, and exercise the horses daily. In stations where there are no steamers, the drivers also have charge of the house.

The call men are divided into companies, each in charge of a foreman. Five are assigned to each horse company, nine to each truck and seven to each engine. They answer every alarm in the district to which they are assigned under penalty of one dollar fine for each neglect.

All firemen are appointed by the chief, subject to approval of the mayor. The permanent men are usually selected from the call force, and one or more substitutes are always provided for the call force. Appointments are always probationary and are not confirmed for at least six months.

The fire alarm telegraph system is indispensable to the efficiency of the department. 338 boxes are scattered about the city at points approved by the chief, and are divided into eight different electrical circuits. Each circuit has its own complement of boxes, bells and gongs, and is connected through an instrument at headquarters called the repeater, with every other circuit in the city.

A brief description of what happens when there is a fire may be of interest. In ringing an alarm the key to the nearest box is obtained from some nearby responsible citizen, the box opened and the hook found inside is pulled down. This starts a mechanical clock movement, operated by a spring, and revolves a circuit wheel, cut with teeth, corresponding to the number of the box. The movement of these teeth, makes and breaks the electrical circuit, and the necessary impetus given the mechanism operating the repeater at the bell and gongs on the circuit. Through the repeater at headquarters the remaining circuits are then set in motion and the alarm sounded throughout the city. The bell strikers are operated mechanically and will strike from 50 to 350 blows without rewinding, depending on the length of the drop for the weight.

In passing through fire alarm headquarters at Newton Centre, the alarm sets in motion the apparatus controlling the pen register and time stamp. The time is stamped on an endless paper tape, and the pen registers the blows, the time being again stamped when the alarm ceases.

The alarm is sounded in each station, the gas is lighted and the stall doors opened automatically, thereby releasing the horses, which are trained to go immediately to their places. The swinging harness is clasped to them with a few rapid movements, and the driver is often in his seat ready to start before the first round of the box is completed. Ten seconds is the record for a two horse hitch in Newton and 15 seconds for a three horse hitch. The doors of the station can be opened by the driver from his seat and as soon as the box is located a start is made.

The house is left to the care of the police officer on that beat, the gas being automatically extinguished in three minutes. The first fireman arriving at a fire has supreme command until a superior officer arrives. On reaching the conflagration the driver of the hose wagon runs a line of hose from the nearest hydrant to the fire and the engine immediately connects with the hydrant and hose. The chemical engines drive a line of hose right into the building.

The chief and assistant chief, go to all fires except during the frequent brush fires in the spring and fall, and they are the only persons authorized to ring in more than one alarm. In a general way it may be said that one engine, one chemical, one truck and 2 to 4 hose wagons answer every alarm. Special danger points like hotels, schools, factories and mills call for extra apparatus. The city is divided into districts, so much apparatus being assigned to each box, more apparatus responding to a second alarm, and the whole department coming to a third. When an alarm is sounded in one district, the second alarm apparatus holds itself in readiness to answer any other first alarm which may come from that district as well as its own.

On returning to the station, all hands, call men and permanent men, turn to and clean the apparatus, wash the hose and hang it in the tower for 2 or 3 days to dry. A spare set being placed on the wagon for duty in the meantime. A record is then made of the alarm and other necessary details and the atmosphere resumes its usual serenity.

The machinery at fire alarm headquarters has all made in this city and is well worth a visit. It consists of a 10 circuit repeater, 10 pen register, controller, time stamp, switches for the different circuits and a battery of 400 cells.

The care of the fire alarm telegraph requires the service of three permanent men, acting under direct supervision of the chief. They keep the various lines in working order, run new wire where needed, and report at all fires, for such duty as may be assigned them.

The chief is a busy man. He not only must be in constant readiness to respond to all alarms, but must see that every piece of apparatus and equipment is in constant readiness for fire service, and that the fire alarm telegraph with its miles of wire is in good working order. Minor duties such as the inspection of all electric wiring, the location of poles and wires by private corporations and individuals, the oversight of storage of inflammable and combustible materials come also within his province. In the execution of these manifold duties the chief travels about twenty miles a day on an average, and thirty miles is not an unusual trip.

The assistant chief with an office at West Newton has general charge of the clerical work of the department, and is also in constant readiness to answer all alarms.

For all the above and for many other reasons, Newton should be proud of its fire department.

The confidence reposed in the department by the city government is well placed and is shared by every citizen who has given the subject any attention.

Drawing the Line.

A good story is told in Missouri at the expense of its once famous governor, Claiborne F. Jackson. Before he solved the enigma of love he had married five sisters in reasonable lapses of consecutiveness. After one wife had been lost and appropriately mourned he espoused another, and he kept his courting within a narrow circle of his own relatives, for he rather liked the family.

The antiquated father of these girls was almost deaf, and when the governor went to this octogenarian to ask for his surviving daughter the following conversation ensued:

"I want Lizzie."

"Oh, you want Lizzie, do you? What for?"

"For my wife."

"For life."

"I want—to marry—her."

"Oh, yes. Just so. I hear you, boy."

"I'm precious glad you do," muttered the governor.

"Well," slowly responded the veteran, "you needn't hallow so that the whole neighborhood knows it. Yes, you can have her. You've got 'em all now, my lad, but for goodness' sake, if anything happens to that 'ere poor misguided gal, don't come and ask me for the old woman!"

Jackson solemnly promised that he never would.

Origin of "Whig."

Several reasons have been assigned to account for the word "Whig," universally known to all the English speaking people. By some the word is supposed to be a contraction of a longer one, "whiggamore," which in some parts of England and Scotland, especially Scotland, signifies a drover or herder.

It was in 1679 that the word first became common in the British Isles, when the struggle was in progress between the peasantry and the aristocracy to have or not to have the bill passed by parliament to exclude the Duke of York from the line of succession. All who were opposed to placing the duke in the line of succession were derisively called "whiggamores," or "drovers," just as the city duke of today speakers of the "grangers," the "grays," the "cham whiskers" and the "hayscedders."

But Scotch tradition gives altogether a different reason for the existence of the word. It is this: During the early religious wars in Scotland the weakest of the factions used the words "We Hope In God" as a motto. The initials of these words were placed on their banners thus, "W. H. I. G." and soon all the followers of that clan were given the title of "Whig," which was afterward attached as a party nickname.

Journalistic Errors.

I do not allude to what are obviously mere misprints, such as when The Morning Post announced at the head of its fashionable intelligence that Lord Palmerston had gone down into Hampshire with a party of flends to shoot peasants, but I refer to blunders due to crass ignorance of a pretentious order. Perhaps the best instance was when one of the "young lions" of The Daily Telegraph in a leading article enumerated the great masters of Greek sculpture as Phidias, Praxiteles and Milo, ignorant of the fact that Milo is not a sculptor, but an island.

The Times was even worse when, mistaking Prussia for Austria, it devoted a whole leader to discussing why Prussia had joined the zollverein. The Saturday Review once explained at great length that the population might be nourished gratuitously on young lambs if killed unwearied before they had begun to crop grass, having therefore cost nothing to feed. Many other instances will doubtless occur to your readers.—Notes and Queries.

A Mixed Wedding Party.

"The college roommate of a friend of mine was engaged to a lady in New York," writes the Rev. Dr. M. Steele in his article on "Some People I Have Married" in The Ladies Home Journal. "His people are Congregationalists, but while at Yale he became a Unitarian. Her parents are Roman Catholics, but she was a member of the Ethical Culture society at Carnegie hall. In compliance with her mother's wish he asked five different priests to marry them, but all refused. In despair he came for me. I married them, an Episcopalian, with the ritual service in a Presbyterian chapel. The Roman Catholic brother of the bride and the Congregational sister of the groom were present. This sister acted as one witness; the other witness was a Jewess."

Careful Statement.

"Was this man Dennis an entire stranger to you?" asked the cross examining counsel of a witness in an important case.

"Sorr?" said the witness, whose stupid face was crossed with wrinkles of anxiety, for he had been warned to be cautious and exact in his answers.

The lawyer repeated his question.

"Well, no, sorr," said the witness, with a sudden gleam of enlightenment. "He couldn't be that, for he had but the wan arm, sorr, but he was a partial stranger, sorr. Ol'd iver seen him befor."—Youth's Companion.

Punishment and Reward.

Whenever a certain Atchison boy is bad, his mother makes him put on his Sunday clothes. She finds that this is punishment enough, though it is reward for her girls when they behave.—Atchison Globe.

Never give up to children if they are in the wrong. Do not rob them of a memory that their mother and father were always true to their principles.—Ladies' Home Journal.

AFTER

The guests are gone the smile slips from the face of the hostess and she gives up to the pain which racks her body. Many a woman entertains and wears a smile while her back aches and her nerves quiver with pain. Surely any medicine which offers relief to women would be worth a trial under such conditions. But when the woman's medicine, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, is offered with the proof of efficacy in thousands of well attested cures, what excuse can then be offered for suffering longer?

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription makes weak women strong and sick women well. It dries enfeebling drains, heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness.

"It is with the greatest pleasure I write you the benefit my mother has received from your 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Golden Medical Discovery,'" says Miss Carrie Johnson, of Lowell, Mass., Co., Va. "She suffered untold misery with uterine disease and nervousness, and had a constant roaring and ringing noise in her head. After taking six bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and 'Golden Medical Discovery,' she was entirely cured."

AT LAST.

There is every indication that the final draft of the double track franchise in Boylston street, granted by the Board of Aldermen to the Boston & Worcester Street Railway Co. is to be accepted. The matter has been batted back and forth between the city and the company for the last six months, the city yielding in every instance from the high standard set earlier in the year. As finally passed the city has modified the conditions so as to relieve the company of the cost of macadamizing the road beds, the construction of drainage and about one-half of the land damages.

These items will ultimately cost the city over $70,000, depending on the amount of land damages. What effect this result will have on future street railway franchises is open to question, but this precedent will undoubtedly subject future aldermen to persistent pressure when like subjects are under consideration.

THE AFTERMATH.

The one dominant note of last week's memorial service was that of patriotism. It thrilled every heart and found fitting vent in the union services held in this city as well as throughout the country. The union services were happily conceived for such an occasion. Patriotism is not confined to religious lines, and in the hour of sorrow, and consequent renewal of faith in our country, it was fitting that the churches should recognize the common brotherhood of citizenship. Wm. McKimley, while living was the embodiment of patriotism, statesmanship and manliness, but his death has caused the love of country to well up in every heart, as it was never felt before, and has made us in truth one people with high and lofty ideals of government.

Attention is called again to the present cumbersome system of caucuses. The Australian ballot for direct caucus nominations is a great advantage but as an attachment to the delegate-convention system it is the most stupid piece of red tape ever perpetrated on an intelligent community.

State politics are receiving scant attention this year as the election of the entire Republican ticket is a foregone conclusion.

Nonantum square still congests.

The real estate tax bills will be sent out early next week.

The caucus registration closed last Friday night, 26 men and 4 women being registered. This farce has cost the city over $50.

About two hundred attended the memorial services to the late President last week Thursday. Mr. W. C. Strong read the President's address, giving the history of the old flag which draped the President's picture present. The rector, Rev. Mr. Williams, gave an excellent address as did also Alderman Wardwell and Rev. Mr. Munro. Rev. J. H. Pillsbury also took part. "America," "Lead Kindly Light" and "Nearer My God to Thee," and other appropriate hymns were sung during the service.

Never were the china shops of Boston more attractive than this season, and never was the fashion for hand-some table ware more the pride of good housekeepers. Not the least among these is the establishment of Jones, McDuffie & Stratton, with its seven floors of specimens direct from every pottery and glass producing country in the world.

For Attorney General.

Police Paragraphs.

Edward Fallon, otherwise known as Barney Fallon, was complained of in court Wednesday by Patrolman Dugan for fast driving. The evidence was that Fallon ran into a carriage on High street, Upper Falls, last Sunday evening, and as a result of the collision the latter vehicle was wrecked. Nor was this all, for the driver of the lighter carriage was thrown out, his collar bone dislocated besides other injuries. Fallon was found guilty and fined $10.

The whistles on the peanut roasters belonging to Wards 1 and 7 fruit dealers have been silenced. A number of complaints were received by Chief Tarbox from people who found the miniature callopes extremely annoying. Orders of a quieting nature were given out Monday night with satisfactory effect.

How Pepper Is Prepared.

The pepper plant is propagated by cuttings, comes into bearing three or four years after it is set and yields two crops annually for about 12 years. When a few of the berries change from green to red, all of them are gathered, because if they were allowed to ripen any longer they would be less pungent. To fit them for market they are dried, separated by rubbing with the hands and cleaned by winnowing. The black pepper of commerce consists of the berries thus prepared.

ADDRESS

By Dr. George L. West of Newton Centre

Before The Newton Nurses
Alumnae Association.

Life in whatever way we may fitly look upon it is by no means a simple thing. Its aspects are as varied as individual vision. (1) Life is kaleidoscopic and presents with each slight ray that our peculiar characters give it a constantly new appearance. Life is complex and into its very complexity we fit easily ourselves. Yet, often with difficulty. Each of us is able to find a proper place for himself in the midst of all these different views. This complexity of life leads to many activities. (2.) Each new impression on our life calls into play new activities or modifications of old ones. Action means reaction and the resulting interplay brings out activities in our life which are simply bewildering. From this complexity of vision, this astonishment of Protean aspect this bewildering of activity no one of us can escape. No life so simple, so modest, so unassuming as to escape its part in the complex figure of existence. One may lead a life so simple, as to be a life of absolute self denial, yet such a life finds a ready place in the ever passing drama of which it plays an unwilling part and the activity which leads to such an extreme of existence even though it may be negative, is nevertheless simply a minor key in the great chord of human existence. One may hide himself and his seclusion from the mart and market, from friend and freind, seek to free himself from his share in the turmoil of life, but Atlas himself might as well expect to cast the weight from off his shoulders as such a man to escape his part in the activity of life. Our existence is a varied one and gives rise to varied activities, and in these activities we each must play an inescapable part. Our first appearance in the act of this bewildering play of forces is as a mere instinctive creature. We bring with us a little instinct and a great future and spend all the days of that future in training that instinct and adding a little thereto. Our whole life is mainly spent in learning how to mould fitly and use properly that which is instinctively in us. Indeed our instinct comes to us as the manifestation of the legacy left us because our ancestors have trained themselves so long, so thoroughly, and so well in this direction that Education and training occupy our time in a more or less attractive manner in our childhood in order to acquire what is lacking as a result of the combination of our inheritance with our immaturity. We educate ourselves in our youth to repress and inhibit those now too exuberant forces of nature, still acquiring knowledge with this very end in view. We educate ourselves in manhood and womanhood to shape and modify most effectively the activities we have already acquired, in old age to keep alive and warm activity enough to make life pleasant and agreeable. Heredity does much toward making a man's life; character does more and training is a factor scarcely less important than character itself, for character depends largely on training, on education. It does not require positive allying one's self with an education of learning in order to train in education fit for life's activity. Four walls do not make a school or college. Experience is a teacher whose school is as wide as the dwelling place of man and among his pupils are enrolled all that have ever attempted even the smallest sum in the human problem. And men have paid more dearly to learn the lesson of experience than have pupils of the most learned scholar or teacher of the world ever saw. To this school we must all go, and with bitterest joy, with lack-lustre eyes or with eagerness of mind, we must learn his lessons well. Yet no one school-master ever taught us all we have learned. As an educational fact in the lives of men and women, the home and domestic influence is more potent than the combined influence of all the universities of the entire world. Nothing burns more deeply into a child's mind than the lesson taught at his mother's knee. Many a man is living an upright, courageous, loyal life at the sight of her who gave him birth and in the remembrance of her whose honest purpose, integrity and motherly devotion and consecration have made upon his mind such an indelible impression that all great ocean's seas of temptation have never will be able to efface. Many a man is serving his fellow-man with righteous purpose and unswerving rectitude and as one who has the precious heritage of the ennobling example of a father's lofty ideals and consistent living. We learn from our friends. Our associates take as active a part in the making of our lives and in determining our activity as does the sun in the everlasting play of the planets. A man's surroundings, his environment, his associations make or mar his life. There is a theory in the study of Natural History that all plants or birds or animals differ from one another merely as a result of the different surroundings in which generation after generation of these living beings have worked out their lives and accordingly one plant, one bird, one animal differs from another merely as a result of the effect of its surroundings, and its associations upon it. We may learn our lessons of sympathy from a hearty hand-shake; we learn courage from our common battle against disadvantage or temptation; we may learn humility and obedience from the prattle of a child; so also we may learn devotion from a mother, determination and purpose from a father, and the whole schooling of a man's life may be in the effect other lives make on it. It was not what Abraham Lincoln learned from his books by the light of the open fire place. It was rather the awful condition of slavery itself into the midst of which the young man was thrown, that gave to the slave his liberator and to this country equal rights and freedom to all without regard to previous condition of race or servitude. It was not the learning of Hebrew lore in Jewish synagogue deeply instilled into the mind of the Nazarene, it was rather the needy condition of his fellow men, the deep, bitter wailings of their souls for generation upon generation, that gave to the world its redemption and to mankind its Savior. We are all pupils in this school of life and learn its lessons by the objective method principally. Experience teaches us and we learn his lesson without choice, with varying emotion and with a result that varies only a little less than our feelings.

To some of us is given the opportunity for education for the training of the mind in the more technical method. The school, the academy, the college, the university add mightily to the acquisition of a keener, truer, and wider view of life and to a fitter, wiser and more adequate use of its activities. They constitute the luxury of education and he who has luxury has an added responsibility. The school and college constitute the highest development of the training of men and he who is best trained yields the widest influence and the graduate of the school or academy or college or university should be best fitted for leadership among his fellows.

In this school of life, in this training for activity, we are not always pupils, we are teachers as well. It is said that one good example deserves another. It is true that one example, whether good or bad incites another and so we become teachers as well as pupils, through that most potent and subtle power, influence. The effect of high minded endeavor and action is to make high and exalted character; the effect of low minded impulses and acts is to pull down and debase character. You cannot do a kind act, however small, to another, without teaching all the world the lesson of brotherly love. You cannot do a mean thing without teaching some one a lesson in chicanery. Man lives better and closer to a high purpose when he sees his fellow living resolutely close to high ideals. Man lives a life of baseness and degradation when he sees and feels the evil in the acts of his fellows. Influence gives us the chance to teach and that chance no man can escape. We each teach a lesson for better, for worse, with each act. Yet influence varies in each of us. Some are bound to be content with small circles of influence. They rise to the full level of their mental capacity, and their environment, but that level has not the height and depth of the influence of those whose mental endowment and training fit them to rise to the topmost pinnacle of leadership among men or to lose themselves completely in self denying service of their brethren. * * * But history shows us on the other hand those who have wielded a wide influence because of the opportunity offered by the circumstances in which they found themselves. The Civil War made Grant; the Revolution gave to the world Washington, and the Reformation brought forth a Luther. Some men, however, are who are teachers who have a wide influence because of a pre-eminent personality. The character revealed in their words and acts is educative to a great number of those who gladly come under such an influence. All of us retain as precious memories the remembrance of the life and deeds of some one whose character and personality, whose individuality shone out like the Pole Star so true, so constant, so impelling, as to cause him consciously or unconsciously to become a leader or teacher. Personality in a marked degree, the quality of exemplifying in a daily life an abstract virtue given to a man or woman, a natural power of teaching others the same high moral lesson. How many English gentlemen of a generation ago looked back with loving thought and more resolute purpose on the teaching of old "Tom Brown?" Who can ever estimate the influence of the teaching of a man like Mark Hopkins, whose pupils are found everywhere in this land, at the bar, in the pulpit, in the country house and market and by the sick bed, all holding in reverent, pleasant dominating memory the kindly, winning, elevating, ennobling influence of the personality of that grand old teacher and man.

Then again there are those who teach because they themselves have given up their time and sacrificed their pleasures in order to devote themselves to training in a special direction. I have said that each new aspect of life calls for new activity, and now I say that each new activity requires its own special training, and those who make that special effort thereby fit themselves to become teachers or by their acts thus trained become educative to all with whom they come into contact. This is specialism and a specialist makes of himself from his very peculiarity a public educator. The electrical expert opens to us a new world; those who are trained in the workings of the human mind give us an enchanting view of scenes we never have known before. The moralist, trained especially to meet the demands of the human soul points us as can no other, to that which buildeth up and truly edifyeth. A physician by reason of his special training, as he moves in and among his pupils, teaches them how to live, eat and sleep better and so he becomes a public educator. A trained nurse is a public educator. She has after due thought, it seems to me long and deliberate, chosen to take a special training. That training means practical renunciation of the pleasures of society, for three years and a self sacrifice and a devotion that is rare. It is no light thing, knowing all that one has to do to become a trained nurse, and it requires courage, bravery and perseverance to persist, and besides these, tact, good health and the disposition almost divine to succeed. The scientific care of the sick is of comparatively recent origin. Read the accounts of the care of patients in any hospital a hundred years ago and see the proud exponents of which you are the proud exponents can be traced. Recall the care of your own sick ones only a few years ago. In many cases the nursing was done by one whose owl-like solemnity was but an imperfect token of her vacuity of sound thinking, or whose garrulous assumption of authority had no foundation save in witless superstition and in antiquated theory. What a pull on one's heart strings to read of the suffering, the needless woe and torment on the part of those who, during the many scenes of one civil war, deserved the best that human assistance could bring them, and yet they suffered simply because there was lack of women's nursing. You are then specialists in this comparatively new science, therefore more aptly public educators because people understand very imperfectly as yet the care of the sick. You are the pioneers and are showing men and women yet the way out of a wilderness of dangerous bigotry in the science of nursing. You are public educators too, because of your devotion to, and special training in, an activity which touches every kind and walk in life. I call your attention to this fact that you are public educators in the true sense of the word because it seems to me that it elevates and adds dignity to your chosen calling. It seems to me it adds to the feeling that you adequately must have answered the call to duty, the serving your suffering brother when you realize that you are not only relieving his pain during the actual time of your personal attention, but you are also teaching him and all who are associated with him to lighten all the burden of suffering. You have sacrificed homes and many pleasures which might have been yours for this your chosen calling to duty. It seems to me that if you realize all that I have said that the weight of your self sacrifice is made lighter in the conscious feeling of assisting to carry the burden not alone of the one whom you may be nursing but of all who witness your ministry. It took devotion and self surrender to win success in this vocation of yours. Does it not all seem well spent in the thought of the larger, fuller service? Do not the trials, the petty failures, the misjudgments, and misgivings, the disappointments, the weariness of body and oftentimes of soul; do not all these seem small and trivial in sight of this larger conception? Do not the long years of training seem, not a time of mere perfunctory preparation, but a rational consecration for genuine service? Does not this larger thought give you a broader and truer aspect of life and the world and make more pleasing and effective your activity in your high calling to the service of man?

Uncle Mingo and the Walter.
Uncle Mingo was in town a day or two ago. It had been a long time since the old man had been to Savannah, and he rambled over the streets all the morning, oppressed with the wonderful things he saw.
Naturally toward the middle he began to feel a little tired and very hungry, so he passed in front of one of the eating houses for colored people, of which there are several in the neighborhood of the Plant system depot, the accented piles of edibles in the windows offered too great a temptation to be resisted. He entered the restaurant and sat down to a table.
"All right, sah," said the affable waiter, coming up. "Wot'll it be?"
"I want," said Uncle Mingo unctuously, "some o' dat fried chicken de winder on a piece o' dat pie."
"Yes, sah. Wot else?"
"I want some o' dat fried chicken, too, an some o' dem doughnuts."
"Yes, sah. Wot else?"
"I want some o' dat ham and some town bread."
"Yes, sah. Wot else?"
"An I want a cup o' tea."
"Cup o' tea. Yes, sah. Wot kin o' tea?"
"Wot kin o' tea I want?" replied the old man, with a severe look. "Wot kin you 'spec' I want? I want sto' tea, sto' tea. You 'tink I come on de train all de way from Pommus Holler for to drink saccafrax?"—Savannah News.

A Certain Cure for Dysentery and Diarrhoea.

"Some years ago I was one of a party that intended making a long bicycle trip," says F. L. Taylor, of New Albany, Bradford County, Pa. "I was taken suddenly with diarrhoea, and was about to give up the trip when editor Ward, of the Laceyville Messenger, suggested that I take; dose of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. I purchased a bottle and took two doses, one before starting and one on the road. I made this trip successfully and never felt any ill effect. Again last summer I was almost completely run down with an attack of dysentery. I bought a bottle of this same remedy and this time one dose cured me." Sold by all druggists.

The Twentieth Century.

The advent of the new century is to be commemorated by the Newton Graphic in the publication of a handsomely bound volume, entitled, "Newton, The Garden City of the Commonwealth, 1871-1901." It will contain valuable and interesting historical matter, fully illustrated with half tone engravings of churches, schools, residences, street views, parks, etc. The history will tell of leading events, characters and progress of the city, and the many advantages of Newton as a beautiful and desirable place of residence will be fully shown. The volume will also contain the portraits and biographies of representative men who, in their lives, their work or their influence have made Newton of to-day the garden city of the Commonwealth and of New England.

It is believed that such a work will commend itself to the citizens of Newton as bringing together a carefully collated record of the lives of men who have contributed to the welfare of our city; men of whom we are justly proud as educators, lawyers, physicians, clergymen and men of affairs.

A publication at this time will give to the present, an up to date account of the city and will bequeath to the future a legacy of what Newton was at the beginning of what promises to be a most remarkable century.

BOSTON AMUSEMENTS.

BOSTON MUSIC HALL: VAUDEVILLE.

Next week's program at Boston Music Hall promises to be wonderfully attractive. Adolphe Mayer's production of the original American-Japanese musical comedy in one act, entitled "Myo San" (White Lilacs) will be one of the noteworthy events of the fall season, and the musical numbers, the dainty dances and the charming girls should be a veritable magnet to amusement lovers. Joseph Adelmann will be heard in selections on the xylophone, the chime organ, and on the drum. Miss Lucy Monroe and Charles Sinclair will present "Jags," a little comedy of errors in which are interpolated Miss Monroe's clever imitations of Anna Held, Fay Templeton and other prominent artists. Others will be Marshall the Mystic, in a juggling novelty, Katherine Harris, comedienne, the Altha Twins, in songs and dances, Price and Shear, in a dainty musical act, and the Shrodes, acrobatic dancers.

Columbia Theatre—Rice's new "Evangeline" is now in the second week of its phenomenally successful run at the Columbia Theatre, Boston, where it promises to remain for a considerable period. Indeed, so emphatic and cordial has been the reception the lavishly appointed extravaganza has met, that Manager Henderson is already announcing the fiftieth performance, to be given Oct. 28. The policy of the management in presenting a company of a hundred people in high class light musical productions of a character never before surpassed has certainly at once caught the fancy of theatre-goers of Boston and vicinity. The reserved seat prices are 25c, 50c, 75c, and $1, and at Wednesday matinees, when no smoking is allowed or liquors sold, the prices are 15c, 25c and 50c. These matinees are designed for ladies and children. Last Wednesday's matinee was attended by an audience quite as large as those present evenings.

NEW MINISTER.

First Sermon by Rev. A. L. Hudson

As Pastor of the Channing Church.

Hebrews, 12. 1: Wherefore, seeing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith.

Although speaking to a congregation of Christian Hebrews, it is very evident that Paul had in mind the Olympic games, in which the youth of Greece used to contend for the prizes, while the leading men of Athens sat within the great amphitheatre watching the games and cheering on the different contestants. You can easily imagine the scene which Paul saw upon the great hill at Athens: The young men stripped for the race, and eager to begin, while the older men upon the benches gazed upon them, inquired their names, and told of the deeds of prowess that were done in the good old times when they were young. Then the race begins and every eye is strained to watch its progress.

Something of the same excitement is found in our own time. During the past week we have heard of the young men preparing for the athletic contests of the autumn, and in a very few weeks two teams, representing the two greatest universities of our land, will stand over yonder face to face for the most exciting battle of the season. And after all the tricks that have been so carefully and secretly practiced, have been tried and met, there will come a time in the game when the issue is to be decided by the power of strength, endurance, and will. Then you will see both sides nerving themselves for the trial, and to cheer them on you will see yonder on the benches the waving of crimson flags. With one man standing below, to lead the cheering, you will hear the crowd give the deep guttural three times and three long "Harvars," and you will see that crimson line rush forward with renewed strength. It seems impossible to withstand such an onslaught. But instantly, at another point on the benches, you will see the blue flags fluttering and will hear those nine short, sharp, exasperating yells that "precede the mighty roar of 'Yale.'" and the blue line will grow firm as a stone wall to withstand the onset. The game has become the struggle of giants in the arena.

Well, let them struggle there. What matter which one scores the touchdown? The great game that is being fought and won is the mastery of self, the development of the "wrestling" thews that throw the world; the power of self-control, the energy, nerve and courage—these are the great prizes that are won in that arena. But more significant even than this is the meaning of the power that comes to those young men from the cloud of witnesses sitting on the benches. What does it mean? Well, first, encouragement, cheer, the fact that some one is on their side, the power of human sympathy, which is always a potent stimulus in deeds of prowess.

But there is something more than that: there is a sense of responsibility that comes to those young men, as they realize that they are representing something larger than themselves. It is not merely their own personal victory over these eleven men; there are, in the first place, the traditions of the two universities in their athletic contests, each man is fired with zeal at thought of the time when Hinkley and Hefelfinger were in the blue line, and Comstock and Holden led the crimson, and they want to maintain the traditions of those earlier days. And that consciousness of acting in a representative capacity, with the sense of responsibility that goes along with it multiplies their effectiveness and power. But there is even deeper significance in all this cheering and striving. It is the sub-consciousness that, far back of these modern contests lie two centuries of manly struggle and endeavor, represented by the earnest life of these two great institutions that have gone into the up-building of the nation. All the splendid traditions of Yale and Harvard are represented yonder on the benches and down here in the arena. That is what is symbolized by the blue and crimson and gives significance to every cheer.

Something of this sort must have been in Paul's mind as he wrote to that little band of Hebrew Christians, saying to them: "We also have our cloud of witnesses." He recalled their ancient traditions; how Moses led the people out of the land of Egypt; how Abraham had come out into an unknown country, he knew not whither, by faith in the word of God, dependence on a higher power; how Isaac and Jacob had maintained that faith, and their descendants. So he recounts the great names of a mighty past and says to his Hebrew disciples: "These men, Abraham and Isaac and Jacob and Barak and Jephtha, Samuel, Saul and David, all the great leaders of Israel in the days of its might as a nation—these are witnesses of your efforts, your struggles, your manhood and your womanhood. Let us then run with patience the race set before us."

The same lesson that Paul sought to interpret in speaking to these early Christians comes to us with equal power today. We are surrounded by a cloud of witnesses. As a great nation all those who have struggled for human liberty sit upon the great benches of eternity, witnesses of our effort to solve the problem of liberty and law today. They are watching our struggle, they are cheering our efforts, they are inspiring us with a sense of our responsibility. The great word of the past century was undoubtedly the word "liberty."

The great word of the on-coming century must be "co-operation." "People must learn to take this liberty, which is the inheritance of the past, and carry it forward into the larger unity of the human race. They must learn that law and liberty are one. That then only is man free, when he is self-controlled, and when character underlies the power of freedom.

Great strain and tension is upon our institutions, and it demands of us patience, courage and wisdom. God grant that they who must meet this need, they who must pass wise laws, and they who must secure the just enforcement of those laws may be strengthened and guided by the infinite intelligence to think and act aright.

"Teach me, O God, to know thy law," should be the constant prayer of those upon whom devolves the responsibility of government. There has never been in the world's history a moment when the power of vital religion and its need were more strongly felt than they are today.

The lesson comes home to us as a Christian church, and to those who compose this Channing church it comes with especial significance at the dawning of its second half century. We also have our cloud of witnesses. We look over the struggle that our denominational ideas have had to find a place in the Christian world. I cannot refrain from speaking a word of personal feeling of gratefulness at the spirit of Christian unity I have found in this place. On Thursday, as we met together in an expression of a common grief and a common faith, it seem to me that the time had come when God's children had learned that they might work together in all the essentials of Christian life and Christian progress, regardless of differences in forms of worship, and statements of belief.

But it has not always been thus easy for us as Unitarians to perform our part in the world's work. We must not forget in our joy and gratitude that behind us lie the struggles and trials of brave men and women. Our fathers have labored hitherto, and we have entered into their labors. We look to the great souls of our faith—Priestly and Martineau and Parker and Freeman; to Channing, the patron saint of our own church. How these have wrought that other men might have the right to think for themselves, and still preserve their place in the common worship of all that was sacred in the religion of their fathers. How they have borne the obloquy of the name "Infidel," "Antichrist," and all the suspicion and vituperation that in early days was heaped upon those who dared to uphold the cause of religious liberty! They sit yonder on the benches as witnesses, prompting our efforts. And the sense of encouragement that comes to us from them is coupled with deep responsibility. Our inheritance requires of us that we shall carry forward to still larger achievement the noble work which they began.

But the memory of other witnesses must come to you at this time with especial vividness and power—witnesses who have been still nearer and dearer to your hearts. Not wood and stone, but the devoted loyalty and generous self-sacrifice of noble lives, are the real foundation and frame work of this church. The names of some of these brave souls were mentioned in your anniversary service one week ago today; but many others must be in your thoughts. I think of one whose life has touched my own very closely in the parish from which I have just come. I never knew him while he lived, but his lofty spirit of consecration to duty, and the splendid ideals he upheld during thirty years of loyal service, made themselves known to me in the very life blood of the church he loved and served so long and well. It seems to me more than a coincidence that in coming to you I find his name enshrined also in your hearts, his teachings cherished in your thoughts, his ideals finding fit expression in your lives. The spirit of Dr. Hosmer is with us today, encouraging our hope and calling us to duty.

Time would fail me, even if I knew their names, to speak of all whose lives have been intertwined with the hopes, the struggles and the victories that have marked the progress of this noble church in its first half century of earnest life; but as we turn to the new tasks and complicated problems that are just before us, the thought is full of inspiration to me that all of these are watching us with eager interest, with love and hope and sympathy, cheering and commanding us to carry forward to still larger fulfillment their uncompleted work. I can only say with Paul, "Wherefore seeing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith."

Lasell Seminary.

Col. H. B. Sprague, who for a number of years past has delivered a literary lecture on the first evening of the academic year at Lasell Seminary, entertained his large audience of teachers, students and invited guests on Thursday evening of this week, with a graphic account of his experiences in Confederate military prisons. The lecture bore the semi-humorous title, "When I was in Jail." He gave a vivid description of the battle of Winchester, in the heat of which he was captured, and of the rapid retreat of Early's army before Sheridan's overwhelming advance. Then followed an account of the prisoners and prisoners at Libby, Salisbury and Danville. The lecture was remarkable in that it avoided all description of unpleasant experiences, merely alluding to them now and then in a good natured and jocular manner, and dwelling with some particularity on the courtesies, kindnesses and Christian spirit shown to the prisoners on many occasions. This is a phase of prison life too often ignored, and it is hoped that Col. Sprague will publish his narrative in permanent form. It is doubly desirable for it covers a different series of experiences from those of Chaplain McCabe and other lecturers. It abounded in amusing anecdotes.

Why Don't You Learn Shorthand?

Stenography is now so important a factor in business and affords so good a vocation that it will be interesting to note that the average time required last year to finish at Hickox's Shorthand School, Copley Square, Boston, was six and a half months. This is a brief time in which to thoroughly learn shorthand at a good school, for it must be borne in mind, this is the leading shorthand school in the country, and the standard of efficiency is higher there than elsewhere; still the cost is not excessive—$15 a month. In other words, smart young women or men at an outlay of about one hundred dollars can learn in half a year, and learn well, a business by which they can at once be sure of earning a good livelihood. The theory, 12 lessons, can be learned as well by mail as orally, the cost being $1 a lesson.

"Our Martyr Presidents."

Nothing since Lincoln's assassination at the hands of John Wilkes Booth and the murder of President Garfield by Charles Jules Giteau has any crime struck home with such terrible force to the sympathetic hearts of the American people and so shocked the civilized world, as the cowardly assassination of President McKinley.

"Our Martyr Presidents," published by Geo. M. Hill Co., Chicago, and New York, is a timely book, containing full accounts of the lives of McKinley, Garfield and Lincoln, their assassins and a history of anarchy. The author, John Coulter, is a famous historian and the introduction is by Senator S. M. Cullom of Illinois, a life long friend of all the martyr Presidents.

The volume will be profusely illustrated with over one hundred fine engravings. The complete volume will be ready at an early date.

Arthur J. Scott of 8 Nonantum place, Newton, is the agent in this city.

Literary Notes

The Atlantic Monthly, always first and foremost to come to the front in any great national emergency, stopped its presses and postponed its publication to pay a brief but well-deserved tribute to the latest—and it is to be hoped the last—presidential martyr, William McKinley.

The glowing words and sympathetic tribute of The Atlantic will sink deep into the heart of every true American man and woman.

Mr. Editor—Allow me to speak a few words in favor of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I suffered for three years with the bronchitis and could not sleep at night. I tried several doctors and various patent medicines, but could get nothing to give me any relief until my wife got a bottle of this valuable medicine, which has completely relieved me. W. S. Brockman, Bagnell, Mo. This remedy is for sale by all druggists.
